MISS MAYME SMITH,

TAY FEVER is endemic catarrh. It T is caused by some irritating substance in the atmosphere during the late summer months. It is generally thought that the pollen of certain weeds and flowers is the cause of it.

Change of locality seems to be the only rational cure. The use of Peruna, however, stimulates the nervous system to resist the effect of the poisonous emanations and sometimes carries the victim through the hay fever season without an attack of the disease.

A large number of people rely upon Peruna for this purpose. Those who do not find it convenient to change their location to avoid Hay Fever, would do well to give Peruna a trial. It has proven of priceless value to

The Nurse Had the Carriage, But the "Baby" Was Missing.

Mrs. Maud Miller Hipple, whose advocacy of a course in "motherhood" for young matrons has already begun to bear good fruit, was talking of the duties of young mothers

"And no young mother," she said, "no matter how many her millions nor how high her station, should trust her little one entirely to a nurse's care. A nurse may be the most intelligent, most conscientious; but to rear a baby properly is a difficult task, and only one person is sufficiently interested in this task to perform it well. That person is the baby's mother."

Mrs. Hipple smiled. "A young mother," she said, "was walking with her husband on the Atlantic City board walk. Suddenly she gave a little cry of pleasure.

'Oh, she said, 'there is nursenurse wheeling baby.'

"And she ran lightly to the luxurious coach of leather, with its swanshaped carriage and its rubber-tired wheels, and she pushed back the parasol that shaded the occupant from the

His First Attempt Henry Finds It a Little Embar-

BY KENNETT HARRIS

The sun was two hours high, but at the end of the corn row I hollered: "Whoa!" and the old mule stopped short in his tracks, as he had a habit of doing whenever his long, alert ears caught the sound of the vowel o, even in the most casual conversation. I jerked the plow out of the furrow hastily scraped the share of clinging soil with my bare foot, unhooked the trace chains and looped them over the hames; the lines I passed and tied through the bit rings and then jumped over the sharp-ridged back that quivered apprehensively at my touch and set off toward the house.

My mother was at the woodpile gathering chips into her apron.

"My land!" she exclaimed, in amazement. "What's the matter, Henry?" I had expected that. I kicked that fool mule in the ribs, for he had stopped. "Nothin'," I answered, sullenly, and then "Geddup, you blame ol' snoozer!"

"But what--" I didn't hear the rest. I slid off at the watering trough and, taking out a dish; pour on milk or cream and the bridle bit, waited for my mule to drink. He took his time, as usual, nuzzling in the water and turning away to survey the landscape.

"Well, finish to-morrow, darn you! I said, at last, and dragged him away to the barn. There I stripped the harness from him, filled his manger with hay and walked resolutely to the house. Mother was inside now, for which I was thankful, and I heard the grinding of the coffee mill. I was washing my feet in the tin washbasin when she came out again, shooing flies before her.

"It ain't supper time yet, Henry," she said.

"I know it," I replied, forbiddingly. I got up without looking at her and paddled into the kitchen, carrying the washdish with me. At the sink I secured a bar of yellow soap and a towel and, filling the basin with cistern water, carried it up to my attic

I opened a drawer and got out the razor I had recently acquired-such a nice, bright razor! It was my first essay, but I shaved myself and not more than three slight cuts tinged the lather with crimson.

I struggled into a stiffly starched shirt and assumed my Sabbath-day and a man is as old as he feels. Just an address expressing appreciation diagonals to the shirtsleeves and took from another drawer a collar of celluloid, white and glistening, smooth and flawless, and a necktie that did not have to be tied, but was by a wonder of human ingenuity so constructed as to have that appearance. I had trouble with my shoes, for they were tight at the best of times, and a day's plowing barefoot is not the best preparation in the world for wearing a snug pair of congress gaiters. By this time I heard my father's voice in the kitchen below and the clatter of

But I wasn't hungry. I waited a few minutes, then put on my coat and went creaking down, nerved for the encounter. My father was seated at the table and my mother was placing a bowl of boiled potatoes at his elbow. They looked at me, but I avoided their eyes and "set up." There was an awful silence. Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless:

Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimi-

It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing full well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty impels them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probable examinations of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money or price you can consult a woman whose knowledge from actual experience is great.
