SOME NEW DISHES.

FOUR WAYS OF PREPARING CHESTNUTS.

Good Things Borowed from French Cooks-Chestnut Salad Worthy a Place on Any Table-Preparation of Grape Juice.

Here is a dish taken from our French neighbors, and one that is, especially now, timely. Peel off the inside skin of chestnuts, then steep in boiling water until the inner skins can be readily removed. Throw as fast as peeled into a bowl of cold water. Put two ounces of butter in a saucepan, with two tablespoonfuls flour. Stir until blended, then pour in one cup or more of clear broth, stirring until smooth. Salt to taste. add chestnuts and simmer gently until soft. Serve with roasted meats or poultry, especially turkey.

ROASTED CHESTNUTS .- Split the skin on one side of large chestnuts and put in a pan with a perforated bottom. Stand over a moderate fire, shaking often until tender. Wrap in a cloth for ten minutes, to steam, then serve with salt and butter.

DEVILED CHESTNUTS .- Put one pound large chestnuts to a saucepan of boiling water and parboil. Plunge into cold water until the skins loosen, then remove them. Dry. thoroughly, then put into a frying pan with hot butter and toss and shake until gold color. Sprinkle with salt, mixed with a little cayenne, and serve either hot or cold, as preferred.

CHESTNUT SALAD .- Make a slit with a penknife in the outer skin of three dozen large chestnuts. Put into a saucepan of hot water, and boil 20 minutes. Drain and plung into cold water until the skins osen. Peel, cut into quarters and dust with salt and pepper. Peel four large sour apples, core and cut into pieces of similar size to nuts. Cut some of the dark meat of a cold reasted turkey or duck into pieces of the same size, and arrange on lettuce leaves in the salad bowl or in individual plates. Sprinkle over them two tablespoonfuls chopped mixed pickles and dress with a French dressing of oil and vinegar and serve.

GRAPE JUICE.-While grapes are at their cheapest it pays to put up plenty of grape juice for home consumption. There is no beverage more refreshing or wholesome in illness than the unfermented juice of the grape, while in hot weather it is one of the most cooling of drinks. Put up at home, a pint bottle costs scarce four cents, while the lowest price at the drug store is 23 cents. To prepare the grape juice cut the bunches of grapes a little, trimming off superfluous stems and taking out the unsound berries. Put in a granite ware Potatoes this year proved a very The dwelling house of S. G. Man- or porcelain-lined kettle, covering with water for two or three inches. The proportion of water is about three quarts to 18 pounds of fruit. Cook until the grapes burst, and the juice exudes, crushing ocasionally with a wooden snoon. Put a colander over a large jar, and cover with a square of cheesecioth. Turn fruit and juice into this, drain, measure and return to a clean preserving kettle. Let it come to a boil and skim. Now add sugar to taste (a half cup to each quart is a good proportion), stir until dissolved, then cook five mincans or bottles sterilized and heated utive committee. Several other cities in pans of boiling water. Fill with are employed be sure the corks are sterilized as well as the bottles themselves. The most convenient bottles to use are the self-sealing pop or beer bottles. Keep in a cool, dark place. If preferred, the grapes may be cooked without water, then diluted when ready to drink.

Overskirts Again.

How fashionable dressmakers do enjoy making poor women miserable! They now assert that overskirts are coming "in," and although a more unwhen burglars entered the general kept up a constant search and men aesthetic sartorial style never afflicted civilization, that does not keep the garment from being admired by the powers of the fashionable world. A brown crepe de chine costume just received from Paris demonstrates the overskirt vogue. It is made with three bias ruffles around the bottom of the full petticoat. Over this, in thin cloth of the same shade, are draped two deep points, one back and the other front, the points falling to the bottom of the skirt, the drapery at one side going half way to the knees before it slopes away to the back and front. With the approach of winter it is prayed that the overskirt may be hauled in and a more simple effect prevail.

Handkerchief Case.

Scald and wash tea matting 14 inches square. While damp turn down warm flatiron. When entirely dry line the inside with cotton batting, one thickness. Sprinkle with sachet powder. Have ready half yard of china silk, turn down a good half inch all one-quarter inch from the edge. Sew with rather more fullness at the corthe middle of the four sides separately; double each side together separately, and ilghtly, and tie together, three inches from the bottom, with ribbon. Fold back each four corners, so the top will look flat. Finish each corner with ribbon bows and plush
