Grand Street Pageant for Semi-Centennial Anniversary.

The arrangements for the celebration of the half-hundredth anniversary of the settlement of this section of Nebraska, at Grand Island, on July 4th, are about complete. It is observed from the Grand Island papers that one of the features is to be a grand parade of four divisions, the first of which will be historical in nature, the second civic, the third to consist of fraternal organizations and the fourth of trade displays—floats. The historic section will contain an ox team and emigrant wagon, such as used by the pioneers in coming from Davenport, Ia., to Nebraska. The survivors are all Germans, from Schleswig-Holstein, the Americans in the colony having returned to more eastern parts years ago. The section will also contain a band of "made-up" Indians, a company of cowboys under the direction of Bradstreet & Clemens, the horsemen, a detachment of "scouts," a reproduction of the old "Fort Independence," built to protect themselves from the Indians, and the eight survivors of the original colony in automobiles. In the afternoon there will be addresses by some of the ablest orators of the state and men who had something to do with its development. It is expected that many of the state officers will be present.
