MANY HAD HAND IN THE WORK

And Tim Woodruff Has Gorgeous Vest Instead of Dressing Gown.

Ordinarily they talk about Tim Woodruff's vests. Lately, however, another tale about the New York politician is going the rounds. According to this, Mr. Woodruff was presented by a handsome silk dressing gown. It was a beautiful thing, and Mr. Woodruff displayed himself in it to the family circle, only to find that it was about four inches too long. "I'll send that to my tailor and have him cut it down," said Mr. Woodruff. Several days later, as he was enjoying the after-dinner cigar, the boy from the tailor's arrived. "Here's your smoking jacket, sir," said the kid. Mr. Woodruff, breathing anticipatory admiration, tried the garment on. "Not my smoking jacket like that." The boy insisted. Mr. Woodruff laid the garment on the table while he argued with the boy. Mrs. Woodruff came in. "What are you doing with your dressing gown now Tim?" she asked. "Did you notice that I cut it down four inches?" Before Mr. Woodruff could answer an aunt who was stopping at the Woodruff home entered. At once she beamed. "Yes, I cut it down for you for a little surprise," said she. "I heard you say it was too long." Mr. Woodruff began to gasp. The trusted maid of the Woodruff menage entered. "Och, there ye have the dressing gown," she exclaimed. "I cut it down for you, but before I bashed it up some wan took it away from my room." The tailor's boy, standing stolidly by, said: "The bill for cutting four inches off the bottom of the smoking jacket is 50 cents." Breathing heavily, Mr. Woodruff said: "Put some pockets in it and I'll wear it as a vest."

Carried Off by Bandits.

When traveling by train from Oroya to Lima, in Peru, the passengers were held up at Galera, 15,000 feet up in the mountains, by a fully armed band, who took some of the travelers as hostages. Fifteen soldiers who were in the train were disarmed, four being wounded and one shot in cold blood because he would not hand over his rifle to the miscreants, who had taken care to cut telegraphic wires and blow up bridges, while the railway staff became servile tools to the brigands. Rev. A. Miles Moss, another clergyman and a party of six friends were for some time prisoners in the mountains, but in due course the Peruvian government troops sent from Lima effected their release.
