LARGEST ANCHORS COMPLETED

Several anchors have recently been made at the navy yard at Charlestown, Mass., which are the largest ever made for any purpose. Four anchors are used on battleships generally, and the new anchors are being shipped in sets to the Pacific coast. One pair of this set of four weighs 17,600 pounds each. The largest anchors ever forged prior to those now being used weighed 16,500 pounds each and cost $2,000 each. They were also made at the Charlestown yard. Each of the big anchors required the work of five men for a month, hammering, smelting and welding it. These mammoth anchors are sufficient, barring unusual conditions of weather and sea, to hold the largest battleship afloat. The size is 15 feet long from crown to shackle, and about nine and one-half feet from one arm point to the other. The heavy crossbar is about 15 feet long, while the palms, of broad, flat pieces, welded to the arm ends, are about 32 inches wide.

Seeing One's Own Voice.

An ingenious machine has been invented by means of which sound can be visualized. All sound comes from air vibrations, which radiate from the center of a circle, just as when a stone is thrown into a still pond the water waves into little waves. The air waves of sound are, however, invisible, and though they can be measured they cannot be seen. By using a small flame and rapidly rotating mirrors, Mr. Brewer Brown, the inventor, is able to show a continuous picture of the vibrations caused by the human voice, which vary, of course, according to the note sounded. It is very difficult for a person to hear whether his own voice is sounding a correct note, but by means of Mr. Brown's machine he can see for himself.

Scotsmen Not Wanted.

Some years ago, Sir James Browne had an amusing encounter with a colored official at Kingston, Jamaica. So far away from home, the famous doctor was, no doubt, a little homesick, and he hoped that he might be able to come across some of his own countrymen. "Are there many Scotsmen in these parts?" he inquired of the said official. "Not many," replied the latter; "just a few—but quite enough."
