Funeral of Kettle Family Dr. J. W. Jones.

Last Thursday morning at the St. Francis Catholic church occurred the last sad rites to the family of W. C. Kettle, composed of himself, his wife, two daughters and son, who were killed in the terrible Dotsero wreck in Colorado on the 15th instant, a full account of which was given in last week's Northwestern. The bodies. accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jens, Mrs. John Jens and Mr. John Kettle, of Grand Junction, Colo., arrived in Ashton Wednesday evening, and laid in state in the Polski vacant building, and were viewed by hundreds of people called to that little village by the terrible results of the disaster, which had wiped out nearly the entire number of what had been an unbroken and happy family previous to the tragic deaths of the five members. It was estimated that at least 2,000 people were called to Ashton that day to pay their last took place at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, Father Radka conducting the services, assisted by Father Yarka of and is greatly missed by all. There were five hearses, Office; Fester's Barber Shop from Loup City, Ashton, Farwell, St. Paul and Dannebrog, each containing a body of the ill-fated family, and the procession was one of the greatest ever seen in this section of the country and the great number of floral emblems attested the esteem in which this family was held. At the cemetery, all the forms were laid in one grave, the father in the center, the wife and mother and one daughter placed on one side, while the son and Clifford Pair to the center were laid in one wife a schoolhouse every day.
