Any remedy that benefits digestion strengthens the nerves.

The nerve centers require nutrition. If the digestion is impaired, the nerve centers become anemic, and nervous debility is the result.

Didn't Care to Mention His Name. A colored woman presented herself the other day in an equal suffrage state at the place of registration to qualify for the casting of her vote on the school question at the next election.

"With what political party do you affiliate?" inquired the clerk of the unaccustomed applicant, using the prescribed formula.

The dusky "lady" blushed, all eyes and confusion. "Is I 'blegged to answer that there question?"

"Certainly, the law requires it." "Then," retreating in dismay, "I don't believe I'll vote, 'cause I'd hate to have to mention the party's name."

Terrors of Frankness. "There is no worse vice than frankness," said Booth Tarkington, at a farewell dinner in New York precedent to his departure for Europe.

"How should I feel, for example, if I asked you for your opinion of my plays, and you answered me frankly, quite frankly?"

"Why, I should feel like the poor lady at the bridge drive who said to her hostess' little daughter:

"Your eyes are such a heavenly blue. And what color are my eyes, darling?"

"The child's high treble traveled easily to the further corner of the quiet room as she replied, looking earnestly up into her questioner's face:

"Dead middles, yellow whites and weed whites!"

Smikes, Curer of Headache

By STACY E. BAKER

Smikes probably fared better in his lame making because he kept from his habit of inventing things until the little germ of romance had properly permeated the heart of the dandel of his choice.

Outwardly the lady may always claim that she wedded the busy brained one only from a spirit of pique, but in her heart of hearts she knows it was her latent love of him that won.

The Smikes person was a most gawky individual answering to the name of Enos and these handicaps should have made him keep to the plodding path of the ordinary citizen instead of racing madly away through bramble and tare to storm every citadel of convention looming before him.

It was Enos who—lived in the wilds of Jersey—threw open the paternal home to the hungry hordes of insects from the swamps, while others lay awake nights battling these mosquito pests.

All that Enos demanded of the classic terrars was that they make their entrance through screens of his own devising—antiseptic screens, impregnating the saw-like instruments of the invaders with a guaranteed tonic to the blood and, at the same time, neutralizing the poison of their stinging trails.

It was a great idea and only for the fact that Enos tried it out on the family before subjecting it to the keener analysis of some medical critic, it would have placed the name of Smikes, laurel-wreathed, among the heroes of Jersey.

As it was, all of the family lived and although a lot of Smikes blood

After one of these vitally interesting periods of drop-the-handkerchief, postoffice and going to Jerusalem, the infatuated Enos met his divinity on the street. It was Saturday, consequently the girl had no school, and the inventive youth invited her over to Dobbs' Drug Emporium to test Dobbs' Imperial Ice cream soda.

Miss Olga demurred. She pleaded as excuse the presence of an excruciating headache, one of which, she furthermore elucidated, invariably followed the little parties like unto the one of the night before.

Now, at this time Hob Sanders and Enos Smikes were running neck and neck in the race for the popular teacher's affections. Hob had money in the bank and the local government sinecure—the postoffice—while, on the other hand, Enos was the Primtown representative of the Purethan Insurance company and was the proud and exalted foreman of the Phoenix Fire company—the volunteer organization of the town.

When Miss Olga spoke of headaches it opened the floodgates of recollection in the teeming idea factory of Enos and it occurred to him that a sure cure headache pill had been the latest goal to which he had aspired before his infatuation for the girl had weaned him away from his craze.

He now saw a chance to achieve fame and dissipate the pretensions of his rival by one well-organized move. He hastily excused himself. For several days Enos was conspicuously absent from the side of his lady love.

The lady, possibly in a spirit of revenge at the unwanted desertion, encouraged Hob and before the absentee's return the postmaster was on the point of proposal with excellent chances of being accepted.

Enos appeared with an excuse for his long absence. "Miss Olga," he began, "he was calling at her boarding house. 'I have here in my hand the Smikes Headache Eradicator, over which I have labored since you told me you suffered with headaches. It is safe. It is safe. I can guarantee it.'"

"How much do you charge?" asked Miss Olga, sweetly. "It—is for you that I have done all this," he protested, brokenly. "Not for wage nor hire." Overcome by his emotions, the young man placed his precious box on the table and left the house, terribly wounded.

Miss Olga really thought a great deal of Enos. After he was gone she opened the pill box gingerly and cast a reflective eye upon the egg-like pellets.

"Truly Enos is far from stingy," she mused. "He would make a good provider and—sometimes I believe I like him best—but no! I mustn't deviate. Hob will propose to-night and I shall accept him." She sighed a little.

Plainly the girl was not furiously in love with Hob. She picked a pellet from the box and swallowed it, another followed—and still another. The jangling ring of the doorbell preceded Hob into the stuffy sitting-room. Hob was all hands and feet. If possible he was homelier than Enos.

The secret of the newly arrived's undue haste lay in the fact that his cunning eyes had rested on his rival as the latter came from the shrine of their mutual goddess.

Hob, as the instinct of the girl had told her, had something to say and now that Enos was again abroad in the land he wanted to say it quickly. Miss Olga surveyed the postmaster indifferently.

"Take a chair," she said, politely, and with an evident effort, stifled a yawn. Hob noted this. It didn't intrigue him to fowery heights or eloquence, but it did hasten his proposal.

"Miss Olga," he began, "I know I am unworthy, but I love you." With this overture he dashed hastily into a carefully prepared speech about his money saved and his prospects for the near future. It was a vitally interesting subject to Hob. Consequently he was surprised when he had completed his speech, at the strange silence that greeted his question, "Will you become my wife?"

He peered at the girl keenly. Horrors! She was—asleep.

With tears of outraged dignity in his eyes, Hob picked up his hat and left for home.

It took the landlady and her two robust sons an hour to wake the sleeping school teacher.

The next night Enos proposed and was accepted.

No one knew that the juvenile brother of the earnest inventor had substituted Papa Smikes' insomnia cure for the carefully compiled drug of the lovesick Enos.

And no one cared.

Time was when it took nearly six years to build a battleship in private yards in the United States; but, says the Scientific American, the construction of the Connecticut at the government yard at Brooklyn set a pace which has steadily accelerated.

The Mississippi, whose trials took place as recently as October, 1907, took 44 months to construct. The New Hampshire, December, 1907, was built in 33 months; the North Carolina (cruiser), January, 1908, in 36 months; Michigan (battleship), 1909, in 34½ months; the Delaware (battleship), October, 1909, in 27 months.

Hard Orders to Fill. He walked into the animal store with a tired expression.

"Can't get what I want anywhere," he announced. "Thought maybe you could supply me."

"We can supply anything in the animal kingdom," said the proprietor, confidently.

"Very well," said the customer. "Give me a sun dog, a moon calf and a sea puss."

Light on Cause of Tuberculosis. The sixth annual meeting of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis was held in Washington on May 2 and 3.

Among the most interesting papers was one by Dr. William H. Park, the famous pathologist and head of the laboratories of the New York city department of health.

Dr. Park contended that pulmonary tuberculosis is very rarely, if ever, caused by infection from bovine sources, such as the drinking of milk or the eating of meat.

Tuberculosis of the stomach and internal organs, which compose only about ten per cent. of the sickness from this disease, are often caused by drinking or eating infected matter.

Doctor Park substantiated his conclusions by showing the results of years of investigation and examination of pathological specimens. His conclusions are substantially those reached by Dr. Robert Koch, the discoverer of the tubercle bacillus.

How He Expressed It. Every small boy—the right kind, anyhow—thinks his own mother the symbol of all perfection.

Richard's mother was putting him to bed, and as she kissed him good night, she said: "Do you know you are the whole world to mamma?"

"Am I?" he answered, quickly. "Well then, you're heaven and the north pole to me!"—Youth's Companion.

Inside and Out. Speaker Cannon, at a dinner in Washington, said, soothingly, to a young suffragette: "After all, you know, there is room for both men and women in this world. Men have their work to do and women have theirs."

"It is the woman's work to provide for the inner man, and it is the man's to provide for the outer woman."

Senator Aldrich. Place as Leader of the Senate is Likely to Cause a Hot Race.

Washington.—Who will be the leader of the senate when Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island retires as he has expressed intention of doing? This question is going the rounds of Washington and as yet there seems to be no definite answer.

Senator Hale of Maine is going to quit and of the old guard Lodge of Massachusetts will be the only one left. It is understood that Senator Frye, also of Maine, is going to let some other man have his place in 1913.

It is admitted that the situation is one that will require much thought on the Republican side. Some see a chance for an insurgent to make it interesting for the leadership race. The senate will still be safely republican when Mr. Aldrich's term expires, no matter what the elections taking place before that time may bring forth, so it is safe to presume that the man who takes Aldrich's place will be a member of the G. O. P.

Appearances Deceitful. She had all the earmarks of a green stenographer, and it therefore occurred to the fresh young clerk that here was one whom he could guy to his heart's content.

Tipping them that he was going to have some fun, he went up to her and said: "Oh, Miss T—, I heard the funniest story today," and he proceeded to get off a time-honored patriarch of a joke.

When he had finished she looked at him guilelessly and said: "Oh, Mr. X, if you ever hear the mate to that, will you tell me?"

"The mate?" said he, rather bewildered. "Well, you know," said she, "Noah took a pair of all things into the ark with him, and now that I know one of the jokes, really I would love to know the other."—Lippincott's.

DIVA'S IDEA OF MARRIAGE

Cavaliere Won't Wed Chanler in Italy Where There is No Divorce Law.

New York.—From street musician and flower girl to one of the world's greatest opera singers and possessor of jewels valued at $500,000 is only a small part of the interesting career of Mme. Lina Cavalieri, who, if she doesn't change her mind, will become the wife of Robert Winthrop Chanler, great grandson of the original John Jacob Astor and heir to several of his millions.

"There is nothing exciting about my engagement," said the diva after the announcement. "My views on marriage have been expressed already, and I am living up to them. Mine is not a romance. It has taken me four months to make up my mind to accept Mr. Chanler."

"You can bet I have not lost my head. I am not sentimentally in love with him. I like him and hope that ours will be a happy union. I believe that love is unnecessary in marriage."

"Although I am not marrying with the idea of divorce I would not marry in Italy, where there is no divorce law. It is comforting to feel that there is an open door. I shall certainly continue singing. Marriage is no reason why I should sacrifice my career, for I love the opera stage."

"I shall not see Mr. Chanler again until my return to New York in November, when the wedding will take place almost immediately. I am now going to fulfill an engagement at the opera house in St. Petersburg and another in Buenos Ayres."

WHO'LL SUCCEED ALDRICH? Place as Leader of the Senate is Likely to Cause a Hot Race.

Scriptural Misquotations. Answering a challenge as to the most constantly misquoted line, a correspondent instances "He who runs may read," which sounds very Scriptural, but is in reality a mangled version of the verse in the Prophet Habakkuk: "Write the vision and make it plain upon the table that he may run that readeth it."

Another Biblical misquotation is concerned: "By the sweat of thy brow shalt thou earn thy bread," the real text in Genesis being, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread." And when we pour "oil on the troubled waters" thousands search the Scriptures in vain for the metaphor.

Fool Remark.

"The inanity of courtes remarks that some people feel called upon to interject into conversation calls for a permanent commission in lunacy," said the man with the ingrowing grouch.

"Now, the other day I was telling Jones going down on the subway that my four-year-old had swallowed a safety pin, and we were up half the night with him."

"It was an accident, of course," said that idiot Jones.
