

GREATEST RECLAMATION PROJECT IN WORLD.

THE ROOSEVELT DAM

ROOSEVELT, Ark.—The largest dam in the world, the Roosevelt structure across the canyon of the Salt river, was formally opened here when Miss Ethel Roosevelt, under the direction of her father, touched the button that sent the imprisoned waters of the Arizona river rippling through the vast system of canals that will transform a shifting desert of 200,000 acres of sand into a veritable Garden of Eden. Colonel Roosevelt, whose activities in behalf of this great reclamation project led to its commencement during his administration, was the principal sponsor of the opening exercises. The first stone of the dam was laid September 20, 1906, and it was completed February 5, 1911. The structure cost approximately $3,500,000. The reservoir will store twelve times more water than New Croton, Washburn and Ashokan combined and insures ample supply for irrigating the desert valley of the Salt river.

GIRL TRADE SCHOOLS

Practical Arts of Home Are Taught Young Women.

Boston Has in Full Operation Two More Advanced Institutions for Those Who Expect to Enter Industrial Field.

Boston.—In addition to the industrial classes for girls in the regular day elementary schools Boston has now in full operation two more advanced schools for girls who sooner or later expect to take up some industrial pursuit. These are known as the Girls' Trade school and the High school for practical arts. The Girls' Trade school is conducted for the purpose of giving a trade training to girls between the ages of 14 and 19 years who are obliged to become wage earners. It does not matter how far a girl has progressed in the elementary schools. The principal in charge selects from the number of applicants those only who are most likely to be able to satisfactorily complete the course.

There are four distinct courses given at this school: Dressmaking, millinery, straw machine operating and clothing machine operating. A girl on being admitted to this school selects one of the courses, which she learns thoroughly. She is also required to take supplementary studies in spelling, reading, business forms, arithmetic, business English, textile color and design, cookery and physical exercise.

In domestic science she takes her part in the preparation of the daily luncheon of the school. She learns the value of simple and nutritious food, the maintenance of health, economy of buying and attractive serving. The care of the body, the necessity of proper food, sleep, exercise, correct standing and sitting, and the need of fresh air are taught.

In this class in design instruction is given in costume sketching, combinations of colors, garment designing and sketches for millinery. This work is immediately and definitely correlated with the shop.

Articles are also manufactured and placed on sale. The standards of the school in every department are the same as found in outside shops and factories. The prices are the same as charged in the better shops, and the quality of workmanship must be as high. Thus in the school the girls meet the same high conditions that they afterward meet outside. The school begins in September, when the other schools begin. It requires about a year for a girl to reach a satisfactory standard of proficiency. Having completed a year at the school the girl is given a certificate of proficiency.

The high school of practical arts has inside of four years outgrown its quarters twice and at present can not meet the demand made by hundreds of girls for admission. This school was started four years ago under discouraging conditions. In the Lyceum hall building, Meetinghouse hill. It had an entering class of 75 members and five instructors. There are now about 190 pupils in the Sarah J. Baker school, Roxbury, and Lyceum hall building, Meetinghouse hill, and the corps of instructors considerably augmented. The school authorities

Raising Trout for Chicago

Interesting and Profitable Industry Is Carried on in Beautiful Section of Michigan.

Paw Paw, Mich.—The ideal place for a trout hatchery is what a member of the Michigan fish commission who recently visited it pronounced the Glen Springs hatchery, four miles southeast of here. It is also famous as one of the beauty spots of Van Buren county, an account of its location in a glen on the east bank of the Paw Paw river, almost wholly inclosed by natural embankments forty feet high, covered with a beautiful grove of forest trees.

Aside from its natural beauty, the place is most interesting because of the work carried on there. Just now there are in the ponds about one million trout in all stages of development, from the eggs to the fish large enough for the market. The fish are marketed principally in Chicago when they attain a weight of a fourth of a

LARGE SALES OF ANTIQUES

London Merchants Look Forward to Disposing of $25,000,000 Worth in Coronation Period.

London.—Dealers in antiques in and around St. James', where ancient articles of fabulous value repose in the shop windows, cabinets and store-rooms, are preparing for a record season on account of the coronation. Representatives of all the dealers are scouring the country for articles of vertu which they think may find a purchaser among the throngs of visitors who will be in London this summer. There is one dealer who is prepared to purchase collections at a figure as high as $250,000, and he estimates that antiques of a total value of $25,000,000 will leave England this summer, purchased by Americans, colonials, Europeans and celebrities.

In an ordinary season the sales would not amount to more than $10,000,000, he added, "but this season we expect exceptionally big prices, owing to the huge demand for antiques, and we can afford to offer a higher purchase price."

The articles principally in demand are porcelain and China bearing the imprint of the factories of Chelsea, Worcester, Plymouth, Derby, Bristol, Dresden and Sevres.

The fact that the king's name is George has created a great demand for Georgian antiques. Furniture of the Georgian era is expected to command good prices, for the fashion among collectors inclines toward that period now. With Americans and colonials English antiques are more popular than the foreign antiques which find their way to the London markets.

Zoo Folk Banquet Guests

Boa Constrictor, Snakes and Waltzing Mice Behaved Well, but Monkey Acquired a Jag.

New York.—Since Harry Lehr gave society new thrills by having a monkey as a guest at dinner, most dining rooms have been reserved for humans. But Raymond L. Ditmars appears in a banquet room of the Waldorf-Astoria with a collection of suit cases filled with live samples from the Bronx zoo, where he is a curator of reptiles. The hunters known as the Rocky Mountain club had invited Ditmars to eat with them and tell them things about his business. He came prepared for a good object lesson.

In order to avoid surprises he opened the cases upon arrival, and in the progress of the dinner from soup to nuts the 100 club members had the intimate company of a variety of snakes, lizards, tortoises, monkeys, waltzing mice and others of Ditmars' daily associates. They lolled on or scampered over tables, tried various courses and were so pleased with the style of things that they were ready to pose as exhibits when the curator arose to speak.

Ditmars first set out to prove that except for weight a boa constrictor would make a good muffer. He had one 25 feet long, which was heavy to lift, but which snuggled close to the speaker's neck when placed there, and pinched no harder than would have the egg tray upon the fish trays.

At this stage of life there is a food sack attached to the body of the fish upon which it subsists for about thirty days, during which time it swims very little, but, for the most part, lies quietly on the bottom of the tray.

After the food sack is absorbed the fish are up and doing and ready for artificial feeding. Their food consists of finely ground and sifted liver, which is obtained in large quantities from the Chicago stock yards and which constitutes the only food of the fish during their entire lives. At the end of sixty days the fish are taken from the hatchery building and placed in what are called the rearing ponds.

Brook trout are the worst kind of cannibals, one fish being able to eat another of half its own size. In consequence of this habit the fish have to be carefully and constantly graded, each different grade being all kept in a separate pond.

Great Bronze Buddha Built at King's Order.

Heathen Idol Is Cast From Captured Cannon and Erected in the Magnificent Royal Temple at Bangkok.

Bangkok, Siam.—Siam, the country of the white elephants, was a short time ago the scene of a very brilliant event, one of the most interesting that has taken place in the history of the country. King Chulalongkorn, the late king of Siam, while touring in the northern part of his kingdom at the end of last year visited the ancient town of Pitsanuloke, which contained within its walls a celebrated many-centuries-old figure of Buddha.

The king was so filled with enthusiasm by this statue that he made vow to place a similar figure in the royal temple, "Wat Suan Dusit," in the capital of his kingdom. He sent off some Buddhist priests immediately to Bangkok, ordering them to bring back six old bronze cannons captured during a war with Burma to Pitsanuloke. In the meantime the king so pushed on the work that by the time the cannons arrived the process of casting could be begun. Faithful Buddhists streamed from far and near and threw gold and silver into the glowing mass. Young girls took off their costly jewels and offered them as a sacrifice; whole families would gladly have given their all. In order that the sanctity of the ancient statue should be conveyed to the new two consecrated silver cords were fastened to the ears of the old statue and given into the charge of the highest honzes, who watched day and night and sang and offered prayers incessantly.

During the casting the king himself held the other end of the cord, while from him outpoured the cord in the form of the new-cast figure. At last, amid the endless rejoicings of the people, the casting was finished and the statue, under the guidance of the king, was conveyed in solemn procession down the river to Bangkok, where the work of art was to be completed. It is said that hundreds of chisels were broken during the work. King Chulalongkorn gilded the face himself and placed in the forehead an enormous precious stone. Then the whole figure was gilded and adorned with Buddhist rosaries of fiery brilliants from the king's treasury. At last the great day came when the new Buddha was to be brought to the royal temple "Wat Suan Dusit."

The scene under a glowing tropical sun was so wonderful, so gorgeous in color, that it will remain unforgettable by all who witnessed it. The gorgeous statue of Buddha, as it carried by an invisible power, moved majestically on the glittering waves of the brood river Menam, followed by the purple-and-gold state barges of the king, the queen, and the whole court. Numberless Buddhist priests clad in yellow garments followed in long fantastic boats singing to the curiously beautiful sounds of the Siamese musical instruments; then came hundreds of little boats filled with the populace, who ended the strange fleet.

The front of the temple was left open to receive the statue of the new Buddha, whose golden body glittered in the sunlight. It was conducted into the temple to the sound of the Siamese national hymn, the festive ringing of gongs, and the singing of the honzes. Suddenly there came a great silence, during which the king with a ringing voice bestowed upon Buddha the name, "Phra Chinnerai."

How He Averted a Duel. The following is told of former Senator Joe Blackburn of Kentucky: In the days of his youth the Kentuckian was asked by a friend to second him in a duel. He consented, and at sunrise the parties met at the appointed place. Now, it was this Kentuckian's duty to say the last words touching the terms of the duel. But, although he faithfully performed this duty, the duel never took place.

A murmur of "Why not?" invariably goes around whenever this story is told, whereupon the answer is as follows: "For a very simple reason. When Joe finished speaking it was too dark for a duel."—Harper's Magazine.

A POLITICAL TALK.

"We've scoured the town for votes."

And now I suppose you expect a clean election."

Eggscasting. Dr. J. S. Slack, the English food expert, said in a recent lecture in Duluth:

"The secret of health is two meals a day with an occasional fast. But people won't avail themselves of this superb secret. It is too unpleasant—like the fresh egg."

"A gentleman, after cutting the top off a soft-boiled egg, summoned the waiter and said: "Waiter, take this egg back to the kitchen, wring its neck, and grill it for me."

Sheer white goods. In fact, any fine wash goods when new, owe much of their attractiveness to the way they are laundered, this being done in a manner to enhance their textile beauty. Home laundering would be equally satisfactory if proper attention was given to starching, the first essential being good starch, which has sufficient strength to stiffen, without thickening the goods. Try Defiance Starch and you will be pleasantly surprised at the improved appearance of your work.

His Interest. "You are going to interest yourself in this reform enterprise?" "Certainly," replied Senator Sorghum.

"But I thought it was unfavorable to your friends." "It is. And I'm going to interest myself in it far enough to let me offer suggestions that will render it impractical."
