The irrigated areas in the Big Aorn Basin and the Yellowstone Vallly present at this time a wholesome example of the value of irrigation. On the Government irrigated homesteads in the vicinity of Ralston, Powell and Garland, Wyo., and along the Yellowstone river near magnificent crops of alfalfa, wheat, oats, potatoes, sugar beets, etc.

An ample supply of water is furnished through the season by the Government. Along the Big Horn River, upon lands taken under the Carey Act, there are likewise extensive areas of profitable crops.

The Government irrigated homesteads under the new Ralston unit are now available for entry. These include some of the most valuable add easily irrigated lands in the Basin. They are surrounded by protecting and magnificent mountain ranges. Local and Government agents holp you in every way to select your land, and they take a deep interest in the devolpment of your farm.

The writer visited that locality the week of Aug. 6th to 12th and saw everywhere such excellant yields, such highly developed farms, canals full of water, fast growing towns, new land going under cultivation, as to warrant this statement, that there are not today, in the United States, better chances for successful farming and future homes than upon the irrigated lands of the above named regions.

Join our personally conducted excursions during the autumn and see for yourself what I om trying to make plain to you.
