

COUNTY ATTORNEY CONTEST

W. J. Fisher, Files Contest for County Attorneyship, for Which Returns Show J. S. Pedler Was Elected

GROUNDS OF COMPLAINT

Alleged Violation of Corrupt Practices Act at Primary and Regular Elections and Alleged Illegal Count of Democratic and Socialist Votes in His Favor

A sensation was sprung last Friday, when W. J. Fisher, late nominee of the progressive party, through his attorneys, R. J. and H. S. Nightingale, filed papers in a contest against J. S. Pedler, who the returns show was elected over W. J. Fisher for county attorney at the late election by nearly 300 majority.

The allegation, which cover some twelve pages of typewritten copy, gives three grounds of complaint, the first being alleged violation of the corrupt practices act in securing the nomination at the primary election; the second covering the same grounds at the general election, and the third reciting erroneous count of ballots on the democratic and socialist ballots in favor of the defendant.

Loup City Girl Goes to China

We have received at this office from Washington, D. C., the announcement that Elder Kenneth H. Wood and wife of Los Angeles, Calif., have accepted the call of the General Conference of Seventh Day Adventists, which has its world headquarters in that city, to go to China as missionaries for that denomination. What makes the announcement of peculiar interest to the people of Loup City and Sherman county is the fact that Mrs. Wood was formerly Miss Florence Nightingale of Loup City, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Nightingale, who moved from here to Southern California a few years ago. Mrs. Wood was born and grew up to womanhood here where she is well and favorably remembered by a legion of friends of herself and parents. She is a niece of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Nightingale. The Northwestern, with our people generally will follow the former Loup City girl and her husband to China with best wishes for their future.

Fortunate Accident.

Last Friday morning, while Mrs. Geo. Zeigler, and her daughters, Mrs. Lsman Pray and Miss Zeigler, were coming into town in their double-seated carriage, driven by the younger daughter, and when near A. J. Johnson's place northeast of the city, a boy who was working for Mr. Zeigler, and was coming into town with them, suddenly struck one of the horses with a whip, causing the team to swerve against a bank, upsetting the carriage and occupants, badly damaging the vehicle but with no injury to those driving therein. An auto coming along just at that time brought the ladies on into the city. It was miraculous that no serious injury resulted, as when the carriage overturned the ladies were for a time pinned underneath. However, when struck with the whip, the plunging team broke the doubletrees and were detached from the vehicle, or the result would undoubtedly have been disastrous.

WRESTLING CONTEST

Stecker Wins Over Miller in Straight Falls

Fast Preliminary Between Robinson, State Welterweight Champion, and 16-Year-Old Clarence Miller

The wrestling game at the old opera house Monday night was hot stuff while it lasted and was gamey as has ever been pulled off in this city. The match was between our local champion, Warren Miller, and one Joe Stecker, an unknown quantity, hailing from Dodge, this state, but who proved by far the best man appearing here and would rank with such men as Gion, Wassen and others.

About one hundred of our lovers of the sport were present and we have heard no complaint of not getting their money's worth.

Preliminary Tussle

The preliminary was first on deck, Referee C. W. Conhiser announcing and introducing Ross Robinson of Lincoln, champion welterweight of the state, and Clarence Miller, the 16-year-old son of Eugene Miller, who at once proceeded to mix, giving fifteen minutes of very pretty work, Miller for the most part working on defensive and had prevented the champion from pinning his shoulders to the mat when time was called.

This contest was not intended to be to a finish, but rather to show the quality and ability of our young amateur and see an exhibition of the work of Ross Robinson, who holds the state welterweight championship in the wrestling game. He is a nice appearing young fellow, sturdy, with well knit frame, of clean habits and a protégé of Farmer Burns, which speaks well for the young man, who will appear here next week with the veteran, announcement of which appears elsewhere in this issue.

The Big Event

At the close of the preliminary came the big event of the evening between heavyweights Miller of this city and Stecker of Dodge. As the big fellows came forward, the upper parts of their bodies bare, and their giant frames from their waists down encased in trunks and their well trained muscles playing in the electric light, a murmur of admiration greeted them. Stecker was perhaps two inches taller than Miller, the latter being just 6 feet in height. In weight it was claimed Miller tipped the beam at 185 pounds, while Stecker was two pounds heavier, although we were later assured Stecker balanced the scales at 204 pounds, and he looked it. In age, Miller was 20 years, while his antagonist confessed his age at 19. At word from Referee Conhiser, the men advanced, shook hands broke away, and then clinched. From that on for the first five minutes, the fun was fast and furious, clinches, break-aways and foot work predominating, with honors about even. Then the superior height, reach, training and experience began to tell and Miller was placed on the defensive, in vain attempts to dislodge the husky Bohunk, get the upper and save his shoulders from the mat. At successive times Stecker got in the toe hold, hammerlock and other danger signals but the nervy Loup City boy balked and stubbornly refused to roll, and at one time the big fellow let up on the hammerlock after Miller's arm was bloodless to the finger tips and resembled the twist of a hemp rope, rather than going further with possible injury. However, the uneven battle could have but one ending and at the end of 18 minutes the mat bore the imprint of both of Miller's shoulders and the first fall accredited to Stecker.

Fifteen minutes rest was then taken, after which the wrestlers locked horns, but the hammerlock hold had left Miller in such shape he was unable to put up good work and within a minute the Dodge lad had forced him to the mat and won the second fall.

It was no cause for humiliation to our Loup City boy to lose the battle, but rather to his credit that he was able to put up the royal battle he did. His opponent has been in the game at least four years to Miller's one, is thus more experienced and seasoned, so to speak, and better able to get in points to his favor, besides having advantages above enumerated.

WRESTLING TOURNAMENT

Farmer Burns, Welterweight Champion Robinson, Henry Smith and Our Own Miller Boys

WEDNESDAY NIGHT, DEC. 4

Next Wednesday night, at the new opera house, will appear Farmer Burns, the nestor of all wrestling, who will give an exposition of the wrestling game, showing the various phases of the sport, toe holds, hamerlock, etc., with the grandest temperance lecture ever given, with plea for clean-cut life, and will referee a contest between Champion Welterweight Robinson and our Clarence Miller, or will take on any welterweight wrestler in the state with forfeit from $50 to $100.

FARMER BURNS, WHO WILL BE HERE NEXT WEDNESDAY

Farmer Burns will also referee a bout between Henry Smith, a heavyweight of Omaha, and our local heavyweight, Warren Miller.

This will be your chance to see the old veteran of wrestling, whose name is familiar in every household in this country, and whose clean, wholesome life is and should be an inspiration to every boy and young man who desires to attain physical perfection.

Ladies—the mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts of our boys and men, are especially invited and will be admitted FREE, and are assured that nothing will be said or done to offend the most fastidious. At Lincoln, Omaha, and other cities, ladies attended freely and enjoy the evening.

Those prejudiced against this physical sport are urged to attend and clear their visions a such prejudice, which is born of lack of personal knowledge of the game.

BAD INDIANS

Two Indian Horse Thieves Captured at Berwyn

Sheriff Joe Wilson, Deputy Chas. Orr and Deputy Sheriff C. M. Hahn, of Cherry county made an important criminal haul on Saturday forenoon of last week when they gathered in at Berwyn "Brown Takes the Gun," better known as "Little Eagle," and Peter Thompson, alias "Little Bear," two Indians from Standing Rock, in the vicinity of Rosebud Agency.

According to partial admissions made by Little Bear, the two noble red men are indirectly concerned with a regularly organized gang of horse thieves that operates between Rosebud Agency and Western Nebraska. For some time past, horses have been disappearing from Cherry county at a rate not at all pleasing to the residents of that section, and the officers of the county have been unusually active in their efforts to locate some of the missing stock.

To this end, Deputy Sheriff Hahn started out of Valentine with only the slenderest of clues to work upon and it was only when he reached the place of J. B. Watts, near Seneca, that he struck the right trail, leading to the capture of the Indians.

He was talking with Mr. Watts, who, by the way, had a stolen horse recovered for him by Sheriff Wilson several months ago, when the latter gentleman mentioned the fact that two Indians had recently passed that way with a bunch of horses, and gave the direction they took. This was enough for the officer from Cherry, and, accompanied by Mr. Watts he started out to pick up the trail.

They found that the alleged horse thieves were apparently headed toward Broken Bow, and when they reached Dunning, there was no doubt of it whatever. Mr. Watts, whose confidence in Sheriff Wilson's ability to locate stolen horses was unlimited, suggested that the Custer county official be notified at once and Mr. Hahn acted upon the suggestion.

It was Friday evening when the telephone wires in the sheriff's office at Broken Bow commenced to get busy. Sheriff Joe was out of town at the time, but Deputy Orr was on deck and at once started to get action on Ansley, Calloway, Oconto, Westerville and other places. Later in the evening information was received that two Indians answering the description given, were at Berwyn with a couple of horses, and had them stabled at Roy Welch's barn.

About this time, Deputy Hahn and his companion arrived on the local freight from the west and Sheriff Joe rolled into town by auto. It was agreed not to start after the fugitives until Saturday morning, thereby giving the western officers a chance to rest up. At nine o'clock the following morning, Sheriff Wilson, Deputy Orr, Deputy Hahn and Mr. Watts boarded Joe's 4-seater car and started in the direction of Berwyn.

They were there all right and as soon as the officers started to arrest them, made an attempt to put up a gun fight. Messrs. Wilson and Hahn were prepared for this, however, and in a few seconds the fugitives were overpowered and their shooting irons taken from them. One had a regular 38 gun and the other a 38 on a 45 frame. Both wore belts well filled with cartridges.

Little Bear, who seems to be the "bad man," of the two, has not been out of the Nebraska penitentiary very long, having been pardoned after serving three years of a five-year sentence for horse stealing. Two horses were found in their possession, a third having been disposed of to a local liveryman, when the two passed through this place last Friday.

Deputy Sheriff Hahn expected to find some of the missing stock from Cherry county, but upon examination, the animals were found to bear the brand of the Rosebud Agency. Later in the day, the officers wired to the Agency and ascertained that the horses had been stolen from there. This puts the case up to Uncle Sam and the Indians will be turned over to a United States Marshal.

HOW TO RELIEVE TOOTHACHE

Oil of Cloves is the Best Home Remedy for That Most Distressing Pain.

There are very few people who have not experienced at some time of their life that nagging, persistent pain known as toothache, a pain that tends to drive one to distraction, and which one is at loss to know how to control. In most of the common aches, a measure of relief can be obtained by the use of liniment, by rubbing or by heat; but the excruciating pains inside the tooth often defy such simple remedies.

The pulp, or nerve, as it is sometimes called, closely resembles a small fiber of beefsteak, and lies in the middle of the tooth. Being thus encased in a bony socket, when it becomes inflamed and starts to swell, there is no opportunity to enlarge, and this is one of the reasons for the severe pains. A similar inflammation in the arm, for instance, of that amount of tissue would hardly be noticed.

Toothache may be roughly divided into two classes, those cases in which the nerve is alive and those in which the nerve is dead. "But," says some one, "I do not see how any tooth can ache without a live nerve; there must be some mistake." There is no mistake, nearly one-half of the toothache we have comes from just such cases. When you see some one going around with his cheek all swelled out, as if he had eaten an apple dumpling and forgotten to swallow it, you may be certain that he has no live pulp in the tooth that is causing the trouble.

Of the many remedies for toothache, the one best adapted for the home is oil of cloves. It is fairly efficient for all forms of toothache, is mild in its action, and does little damage if it accidentally spreads on the tissue. Strong solutions containing carbolic acid, such as are often sold in the form of liquids, or waxes, should be avoided, as very often the mouth is burned by their use.

When the pulp is alive the tooth is sensitive to heat and cold, sweats hurt it, and anything thrust into the cavity causes intense pain. It generally has what we style jumping pains, but there is little soreness, or swelling. In these cases if the cavity is gently wiped out with a pledget of cotton, and a small piece of cotton saturated with the oil is laid in the bottom and held in by a larger pellet of cotton, the pain will generally subside, if there has not been too much inflammation.

When the pulp is dead, the pain is dull and heavy, the tooth is sore and feels longer than the others when we bite. In time there is swelling and much distress. In these cases there will not be much relief from the medicine unless it should happen that the cavity is open to the dead pulp and the medicine can get to it. Home remedies are useful only as expedients to quiet pain until more permanent and reliable service can be secured. (Copyright, Western Newspaper Union.)

FILLINGS FOR THE TEETH

Gold is Usually Best for the Purpose, but Other Materials Often Are Used.

Of all the materials used in the filling of teeth, none other has won quite so universal regard as gold. We learn from history that it was perhaps the first substance to be used for this purpose, and while the manner of using it has changed, it still holds an important place in the equipment of the dentist. The advantages that gold possesses as a filling material are many. It more nearly approaches the color of the teeth than any other metal; it can be easily placed in the cavity of a tooth so firmly as to prevent further decay; it is not affected by the saliva or the foods that we eat, and it does not discolor the tooth that it filled.

Many people have no other filling in their teeth than gold, and with those who can afford it, and who desire it, it does very well. The usual method, however, is to rely upon the judgment of the dentist as to which filling material is best adapted to each tooth. For instance, an average mouth may show gold fillings, amalgam fillings, gold inlays, porcelain inlays, crowns of various sorts and bridges, all serving a useful purpose, and placed according to the dentist's best judgment.

The usual location for the gold filling is the front teeth, where its durability and its freedom from staining render it valuable. Where the cavity is large and it would thereby be very noticeable, it would be better to use a porcelain or enamel filling, though as a rule they are not as durable.

Many people in order to economize have their teeth filled with cement instead of gold, and while sometimes this may be necessary, yet as a rule it is poor economy, for gold is a permanent filling, while with the cheap cements we may only hope for temporary relief.

Some people show poor taste in trying to have their teeth display as much gold as possible, much after the style of the Jockey who sports a massive watch chain. Others carry their sensitive feelings too far the other way, and will not allow any gold in their mouth whatever, even if it is the one thing needful to preserve the tooth. Both these extremes are wrong, and the sooner we get to using better judgment the better for our teeth. The shape of the tooth, its location, condition and other points enter into the question so largely, that after all the decision of the proper filling is really a technical one.
