

BREAKS A COLD IN A DAY And Cures Any Cough That Is Curable. Noted Doctor's Formula.

"From your druggist get two ounces of Glycerine and half an ounce of Globe Pine Compound (Concentrated Pine). Take these two ingredients home and put them into a half pint of good whiskey. Take one or two teaspoonsful after each meal and at bedtime. Smaller doses to children according to age. This is the best formula known to science. There are many cheaper preparations of large quantity, but it don't pay to experiment with a bad cold. Be sure to get only the genuine Globe Pine Compound (Concentrated Pine). Each half ounce bottle comes in a sealed tin screw-top case. If your druggist does not have it in stock he will get it quickly from his wholesale house. This has been published here every winter for six years and thousands of families know its value. Published by the Globe Pharmaceutical Laboratories of Chicago.

WHAT WORRIED HER.

"I asked your father and he said you were old enough to know your own mind."
"He didn't tell you how old I was, did he?"

ECZEMA CAME ON SCALP

Lebanon, O.—"My eczema started on my thigh with a small pimple. It also came on my scalp. It began to itch and I began to scratch. For eighteen or twenty years I could not tell what I passed through with that awful itching. I would scratch until the blood would soak through my underwear, and I couldn't talk to my friends on the street but I would be digging and punching that spot, until I was very much ashamed. The itching was so intense I could not sleep after once in bed and warm. I certainly suffered torment with that eczema for many years.

"I chased after everything I ever heard of, but all to no avail. I saw the advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a sample. Imagine my delight when I applied the first dose to that awful itching fire on my leg and scalp, in less than a minute the itching on both places ceased. I got some more Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After the second day I never had another itching spell. Cuticura Soap and Ointment completely cured me. I was troubled with awful dandruff all over my scalp. The Cuticura Soap had cured that trouble." (Signed) L. R. Fink, Jan. 22, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 22-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L. Boston." adv.

Man's Preference.

Miss Lillian Hill, lecturing on eugenics in Cleveland, said:

"It is a good thing for the human race that beauty counts for more than intellect when it comes to love. Intellect too often means nerves—in-somnia—hypocondria."
"Yes, it is a good thing for the human race that, as an old maid from Vassar put it rather bitterly:
"Men prefer a well formed girl to a well informed one."

Its Popularity.

"What public board is most in favor of a municipality?"
"I rather think it is the festive board."

Its Pace.

"So time runs its race?"
"Yes, in the laps of years."
Some of the charity that begins at home isn't worth making a fuss about.

Return of Flounce to Favor for Southland Dancing Frocks

Flounces have come back into fashion, as is evidenced by the dainty dancing frocks for wear at Palm Beach, and by quite as dainty day costumes of embroidery and sheer materials. Flounces—the modern flounces, at least—are not gathered at the upper edge in the least, but are applied flatly to the narrow skirt so that the narrow silhouette is not spoiled. Many of the most charming frocks for the southland show very sheer machine embroidered flouncings used in this way and the illustration herewith pictures gold embroidered chiffon used in the same fashion, one flounce falling above the other in three tiers.

LATEST IN LUNCHEON SETS

Can Be Made With Prettiest of Effects Without Too Great Strain on the Purchaser's Purse.

At midseason one always goes over the house to find what needs renewing in linens, and bureau scarfs are usually among the things which must be replaced. For either chiffonier, serving table or sideboard filet lace is popular, but to those who do not care for it point de Venise is shown. Of course, these real lace scarfs bring immense prices, ranging from about $150 up to $1,000. For those who are content with excessive simplicity plain hemstitched linen is to be had and these are priced up from $1 according to size. Luncheon sets are to be had reasonably and are indispensable when one wishes to keep house easily and well. The sets embroidered in colored silk are out of fashion and the all-linen embroidered in linen thread or lace and embroidery sets are in fashion. These average 25 pieces to the set and range in price from less than $10 to $500 and $1,000. For daily use Maderian embroidered sets, though they have been popular for years, are still in vogue and are always satisfactory in appearance and wearing quality.

"YVONNE."

Charming theater blouse, in black chiffon over biscuit chiffon, with fine gold lace and deep swathing of Chartreuse ribbon.

Accordian Plaited Waists. Nowadays the waist has entered upon a new phase, and the accordian plaited example is carrying all before it.

Every girl must have her little waist accordian plaited, while most of these are belted in at the waist with a tiny accordian-basque depending from it. Ninon and crepe de chine are the favorite materials, and the brocade belt of various tint which encircles the waist has usually one short end depending from it finished with thick fringe.

Warm Foot Muff. A foot muff of leather, fur lined, fitted with an electric or hot water foot warmer and made so that it can be drawn up snugly around the ankles, where it is finished with a wide band of long haired fur, is something every woman who motors much in winter should possess.

French Plumes. French plumes in solid and two-toned effects are in evidence. Many small hats depend on some ostrich novelty, placed at some odd angle for decoration.

FRENCH JEWELRY IN VOGUE

Artificial Trinkets Are Now Worn by the Best Dressed of the Society Women.

With the makers of this attractive jewelry growing more clever each year and copying more closely the genuine, it has long since ceased to be a social error for the well-dressed woman to use it. The designs are artistic, the pieces useful and the assortment offered so wonderfully large, a woman has at her disposal innumerable little trinkets for her adorning.

It is particularly suited for gift giving, particularly from one woman to another. Now that earrings are so very much the vogue one may have the right kind for each gown, when the most elaborate pair seldom cost a sum over two figures and much more frequently one below it. The pearl and rhinestone effects are especially good, and there are gleaming pendants, little bowknots and other ornaments with which to deck our ears and fill our trinket boxes.

Then there are corsage pins to hold one's flowers in place, delicate trifles that are almost as pretty as the blossoms they hold. Slipper buckles, too, are in this French jewelry—enamelled and jeweled and rhinestone affairs that look their best when decorating a satin, kid or suede slipper.

What with ruffles and frills and Robespierre collars and other neck fixings, she is an unusual woman who does not need for several bar pins. If the stones are glass and the pearls baroque, the gems rhinestone and the metal but near-gold, one may procure the prettiest of them for quite a moderate sum.

Fads of Fashion. Skirts are unquestionably and indisputably wider.

Coats are closed at the throat in imitation of the military style.

Separate white waists in quaint designs are worn with many costumes.

Skirted coats are fashionable and almost always becoming to the slender figure.

Shoulders of the blouse coat are quite unique, with the material gathered into the shoulder seam under a band or strap.

To Shrink Woollens. The question is frequently asked how to shrink woollen goods, and for the benefit of those who have a task of this nature here is a simple method: Wet a sheet and spread it out on a table. Then place one thickness of the goods lengthwise of the sheet.

Begin at one end and roll sheet and goods together. Lay the roll of goods away on a platter or waiter until morning. After unrolling the goods press on the wrong side with a hot iron. If there should be any doubt about the right side of the goods before shrinking it would be better after determining the right side to mark it by sewing a bit of cloth near a corner so there will be no trouble in ascertaining the right side after shrinking.

LIGHT ON HIS PAST

Girl's Fiance Makes a Confession That Surprises More Than One Friend.

By FRANK FILSON.

"Fanny, you've been lording it over me for the past month, ever since your engagement to Edward Brooks. But you can't do it any more," said her friend Mildred Thomas, holding out her left hand with a blush. Fanny Upton seized it and dragged her friend into the light. On Mildred's third finger sparkled a diamond in a platinum ring.

"Mildred!" exclaimed Fanny, kissing her. "Who is it?"
"I mustn't tell you," answered Mildred. "Now don't be angry, dear, because you shall be the very first person to know. It's a sacred promise—for certain reasons."

"Oh, I'm sure I don't want to know, Mildred," said Fanny coldly, releasing the hand she held.

"Oh yes you do, Fanny. Now don't be cross. Listen! We're going to have an engagement party on Saturday night, and it will be announced then. And you are to come and be told first. See?"

Fanny was mollified a little. "Well, if you think it's worth making a secret of to please your fiancé, all right," she said. "But you know very well he has secrets he hasn't shared with you."

"Fanny!" cried Mildred Thomas indignantly. "Of course he has, goose. Don't you suppose he has been in love dozens of times—rapturously in love, and never told you a word of it?"

"Fanny," said her friend indignantly, "he told me that he has never been in love in his life before. He has never kissed any girl but me."

"Booh!" said Fanny mockingly. "Now Edward knew I was too sensible to fall for that sort of yarn and he confessed. But he didn't tell me all. No, sir, and I'm going to find out a whole lot more before I marry him."

Mildred remained coldly silent.

"Oh, Mildred, here's a joke," said her versatile friend. "Now are you game for it? Let's each write a letter to our fiances, saying, 'I have found you to explain—if you can.' What a joke that would be! Picture the poor men's faces! Will you, Mildred?"

"Mr. George Howard, Miss Upton."

"It seems a shame," murmured Mildred. "But I couldn't bear to think he had deceived me. Are you sure he has, Fanny?"

"My dearest girl, of course he has. How old is he? Twenty-eight! And never kissed anyone but you? Mildred, you certainly are simple. And now's the time to show him you aren't as simple as he thinks, and he'll think all the more of you for it. Is it a bargain?"

It was. It was not without many misgivings that Mildred Thomas mailed her letter to George Howard. But Fanny's hints were eating into her soul like vitriol. She must know, whether her lover ever had been in love before. That would be dreadful. Still she might forgive it, but she could never forgive deceit. When the letter was mailed she wanted it back, and all that day and the next she listened in terror for the post-man's whistle. On the third day, Friday, the answer came—a hasty, incoherent letter, full of self-accusations and reproaches. "I shall tell you about what you refer to when I call tomorrow evening," he wrote. "And I shall come half an hour before the party, in the hope of gaining your forgiveness before the guests arrive."

Mildred was looking her prettiest when George Howard arrived. He looked so haggard and mournful that she could hardly find words with which to greet him. Bitterly now she repented having been persuaded by Fanny to play that foolish joke. But she must play her part through. They sat down very soberly side by side in the empty reception room.

"I'm going to tell you everything, Mildred," said George humbly. "I did not willfully deceive you, for it was only because I had put the memory of that mad summer, two years ago, out of my mind and heart, and dared not recall it, even to myself. She was the only woman before you."

"Go on," murmured Mildred, and to her consternation she discovered that she was not shocked at all—only deeply interested.

"It was at Atlantic City. I won't tell you her name. We were almost the only guests at the hotel at the end of the season. We fell in love with each other; we loved each other madly. We were engaged. Then she went back to town, and I, like a fool, lived in a fool's paradise, anticipating the time when I should meet her again, to ask her to fulfill her promise. Well, the upshot was that she had imagined me to be a cousin of mine, Garfield Howard, the wealthy manufacturer. When I called at her home she was quite frank about it. She said she had loved me and would have fulfilled her promise, but she had resolved never to marry a poor man."

"The horrid cat!" exclaimed Mildred indignantly, slipping her hand into his.

"That broke the spell, Mildred. I realized then that I had never loved her. I learned to laugh at my infatuation, for I saw her as she was, and my love was dead. So don't you be afraid, in case we ever meet, for I have seen her two or three times since then, and there is nothing left in my heart but aversion."

"Darling!" said Mildred, putting up her face for a kiss.

"And I am forgiven, dearest?" whispered George.

"Absolutely. Now listen, for the guests will be here in a few moments. I'm going to announce it and tell them your name. It's all a profound secret, just as I promised you. I want you to meet my friend—"

But she did not finish the sentence, for the maid opened the door and announced Miss Upton and Mr. Edward Brooks. Mildred darted forward and embraced Fanny and shook hands with her fiancé.

"I want to present my fiancé," she announced triumphantly. "Mr. George Howard, Miss Upton—Mr. Howard, Mr. Brooks. Now you have got to like each other as hard as you can, Fanny!"

The last remark was almost an interjection, for Fanny Upton had put forth her hand as gingerly as though it were of porcelain, and George was stretching out his finger tips as though he was afraid of never getting them back again.

"Mr. Howard and I have met before," said Fanny icily.

"You have? You never told me where?"

"I think it was at Atlantic City, or thereabouts," said Miss Upton casually.

NOT HARD TO TELL FORTUNES

Little Need for Soothsayer to Be Fitted With Much More Than Ordinary Intelligence.

The way to tell people's fortunes is to have one list of characteristics, and use it for every one without the slightest variation. It is bound to succeed. For instance, suppose Falstaff and Hamlet had their fortunes told by the same soothsayer. I imagine he would have told Hamlet's character as follows:

"You are not as fortunate as you seem. You have a great deal of sense, but more sense than knowledge. You can give admirable advice to other people. Your judgment is excellent as regards others, but bad as regards yourself. You never value your own good advice. You are fond of your friends. You prefer to talk to action. You suffer from indecision. You are fond of the stage. You are susceptible to female beauty. You are witty, amiable and well educated, but you like coarse jokes. You are superstitious and believe in ghosts. You can make people laugh. You often pretend to be more foolish than you are. At other times you will surprise people by your power of apt repartee. Your bone will be your inclination to fat, which will hamper you in fighting. You are unsuccessful as a soldier, but unrivaled as a companion and philosopher. You will mix in high society, have friends at court. You will come off badly in personal encounter and your final enemy will be a king."

Now imagine him saying exactly the same thing to Falstaff. Doesn't it fit him just as well? Can't you imagine Falstaff saying: "He has hit me off to a T," and Hamlet murmuring: "My prophetic soul!" In fact, I believe fortune telling after the method of the poor man's faces! Will you, Mildred?"

It seems a shame," murmured Mildred. "But I couldn't bear to think he had deceived me. Are you sure he has, Fanny?"

My dearest girl, of course he has. How old is he? Twenty-eight! And never kissed anyone but you? Mildred, you certainly are simple. And now's the time to show him you aren't as simple as he thinks, and he'll think all the more of you for it. Is it a bargain?"

WHERE WE FIND EMERALDS

Famous Muzo Mines in the Republic of Colombia Produce Finest Gems.

The finest emeralds are found in the Republic of Colombia, at the famous Muzo mines in the department of Boyaca, seventy miles north by west of Bogota, which have been worked since 1558. The Spaniards mined there in the middle of the sixteenth century, but withdrew after a time, owing to continual fighting with the Indians; with the result that for awhile the locality of the mines was unknown. They are now worked by an English company, in partnership with the government. The emeralds at Muzo occur in calcite veins running through black carboniferous limestone in all directions and at all angles. Often the limestone is covered with earth, in which bushes and trees are growing; this has to be cleared before prospecting is possible. When calcite veins have been located, the side of the hill is dug away in "banks," usually by Indians, whose chief tool is a steel bar forged to a point at one end. The pieces of calcite vein are examined superficially for emeralds, and are then set aside for conveyance to the sorting-shed, where a detailed examination is made, and the emeralds are divided into fifteen grades according to color, transparency, size, freedom from flaws, and so on.

The Rev. Edmund Hestlop of Wigton, Pa., suffered from Dropsy for a year. His limbs and feet were swollen and puffed. He had heart fluttering, was dizzy and exhausted at the least exertion. Hands and feet were cold and he had such a dragging sensation across the loins that it was difficult to move.

After using 5 boxes of Dodds' Kidney Pills, the swelling disappeared and he felt himself again. He says he has been benefited and blessed by the use of Dodds' Kidney Pills. Several months later he wrote: I have not changed my faith in your remedy since the above statement was authorized. Correspond with Rev. E. Hestlop about this wonderful remedy.
