J. W. BURLEIGH, Editor and Pub

By a vote of 21 to 8, the Nebraska senate Monday refused to repeal the one-fifth mill levy for state aid for bridges.

Dr. Everett Cathell, who will be remembered as being here at the Chautauqua last fall and delivered a splendid address on Lincoln, died at Warsaw, N. Y., last Sunday of pneumonia.

Central City, by a majority of five votes, last Saturday voted bonds to the extent of $55,000 for the erection of a new high school building and a ward school. Good for Central City.

A druggist's mistake at Sunderland this state last Friday in selling a rank poison instead of a package of salts, caused the death of a woman, she dying in less than five minutes after taking the dose and before help could arrive. No arrests were made at the time, but investigation is on foot.

Joaquin Miller, next to Mark Twain the greatest, or at least most noted, of the present century of poets and authors, died at his home in California Monday of last week. Who has not enjoyed the writings of that quaint old man of letters?

Two hundred and twelve people were killed and 1,464 injured in 1,303 auto accidents in the United States and Canada during the five weeks between December 15, 1912, and January 23, 1913, according to reports received.

The fearful injury suffered by Mrs. McCray last Thursday from a fall on one of our treacherous cement walks, calls attention to one of the dangerous elements of the past cement walk building in our city. When cement walks first began building in our city they were for a time made with a smooth and glassy surface, making walking on the same in wet or icy weather extremely difficult. Later the cement work was changed in a new building to rough finish, which proved safe and sane. It is but little wonder that the lady received the fearful fall, the only wonder being that we have not had to record many accidents, with broken limbs as results. Now comes a question of how to overcome the glaring defects in the early cement walk work in the city. Could not property owners having the smooth walks have the same roughed over without very much cost? It would seem that something should be done along this line before other and perhaps more serious accidents happen. The editor calls attention to this as one property owner who has cement walks of the smooth variety in front and around his residence, and would be one to remedy the defect if it could be done at reasonable cost. To be sure the walks were built before we purchased same, but undoubtedly had we had it done we should have made the same grievous mistake. What is wanted now is some remedy, and we have no doubt all property owners having such smooth walks would be equally willing to apply any reasonable remedy. Let us take action at an early date and eliminate the danger to pedestrians.

Word being received from the bedside of Mayor H. W. Pedler at Grand Island Tuesday evening that his condition was very critical, on Wednesday morning his brother, J. S. Pedler, and Dr. Longacre went to Grand Island, and at once phoned that his life was despaired of. However, this morning word was received that he rested better last night.
