its consideration. Senator Clarence D. Clark of Wyoming, who is not given to "tearing a passion to tatters," broke his usual reticence by an impassioned speech, in which he predicted dire things to the democratic party in putting the Underwood bill through the senate without proper consideration. He said the Underwood bill was as much a law as if the vote had been taken and the president had attached, his signature to the measure. "Many of you democrats are ashamed of this bill for you know it's wrong," said Senator Clark, "but you are going to vote to railroad this bill through because of a secret political caucus. "By your vote you are going to tell the American people that a section of the senate is eminently equipped with ability to enact a tariff bill without so much as a hearing from the manufacturers since the Underwood bill passed the house.

Senator Jones of Washington, republican, who previously had determined to vote against public hearings, announced just before the roll call that he had changed his mind because the finance subcommittees were giving private hearings to some interests which he thought should be public.

The closing day of debate on the hearings was enlivened with a discussion of the democratic platform and its bearing on free sugar by Senator James of Kentucky, who vigorously defended the stand taken by President Wilson for free sugar, declared that the party had stood for free sugar and campaigned on it and defied the Louisna senator to find a man President | condition of winter wheat.
