State Editorial Meet

The annual meeting of the State Editorial Association at Omaha Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of last week was by far the best held by the association in the history of the past. Omaha just spread herself and as they had claimed would be there was scarcely breathing spell between "doings". In fact, the big reception committee would scarcely give the association time to hold its meetings, but wanted even those necessary hours to show the scribes and their more popular side parts the good things in store for them. The entertainment for the visitors began proper with luncheon at noon at the Rome, followed that evening by an entertainment and lunch at the den for the boys and a reception for the girls at the home of Mrs. New-branch, wife of the editor of the World-Herald. Tuesday noon was seeing the packing houses, followed by heap big eats at the stockyards and an auto ride over the tornado district and boulevards of the city and banquet and dance in the evening at the Field Club. Wednesday noon was a dinner for the ladies at the Commercial Club by the Equal Sur-fragists and dinner in the Olive room at the Rome for the editors, while Wednesday evening was given over to a fine program of entertainment at the Commercial Club, seventeenth floor of the W. O. W., and accompany- eate. As for the editorial program, for each day, as no one but the editors themselves are particularly interested in those events, we pass them over. There were so many of the big men and women in Omaha who were on the reception committee that we could no more than generalize them, composed as they were of the cream of the newspaper fraternity and type and paper houses, besides those em- inent in other lines of business, but in South Omaha the main force was our own "Doc" Tanner, the newspaper man, whom all the boys swear by, who turned his office to over the "devil" and worked night and day for weeks to make our visit to the pack- ing house industries one of the big- gest card in the pack, in which he was backed by the mayor, the presi- dent of the packing house industries and all leading men. At the close of the dinner, "Doc" was toastmaster, "showing" that South Omaha was the third largest in the packing in- dustries in the world and in some respects ranked second. He gave fig- ures showing business running into millions annually. We cannot at this time publish the most surprising sta- tistics given, but hope to do so later. As a poet, also, "Bix" must rise early to take "Doc's" measure as shown at that and other times. However, we will not take up further space at this time in telling our readers of the great time given the fraternity by both Omahas, but can swear every editor returned home singing the praises of "Omaha, My Omaha."

Winter wheat is all headed out and the yield will be good. Rye filling well; oats look grand; potatoes promise one of the best crops in years; hay is also the best in several years. Alfalfa is over half in the stack and the crop is the best ever raised in Sherman county. Rye will be ready to cut on or before the first of July. Millet and cane promise a big yield now. Pastures are also the best in years and are still improving. The stand of corn is good and most fields are clean. Some fields of corn culti- vated over once. Tame cherries are commencing to ripen. Lots of Prairie being broken this year.

It looks good to see the farmers breaking out the small draws that are in their fields. Some of these places have been farmed around for years, but the farmers realize now that these places are the richest on their farms and that it takes time to farm around them, and time is money in this day and age. It increases the price of the farm when you come to sell. There are some fifteen patrons on the route that have improved their farms by doing this this spring.

it is the care, of lack of care given to one's income that is responsible for his financial position. We find that after people have decided to open an ac- count with us and make it a gauge of their progress in getting ahead in the world, and have made a few deposits they soon acquire the "repeating" habit. They find it much easier to accumulate than they thought. Why not start an ac- count with us? You will find as the account grows that it will act as a stimulus to greater effort, greater achievement.
