LOADING A FINE ART

ACCOMPLISHMENT HARD TO ONE NOT BORN TO IT.

Everyone Should Set Apart Some Time for Absolute Relaxation—Is Woman's Secret of Perennial Youth.

Most of us need a spell of loafing now and then, but few of us know how to loaf. Indeed I don't think it would be at all a bad idea to hold classes in loafing all over this hustling country of ours, says a writer in the Rehoboth Sunday Herald. It comes so hard to any one who isn't born a loafer—and the born loafer doesn't count. He exaggerates what should be a recreation, and occasional indulgence, into a habit, thereby spoiling both life and loaf, and incidentally throwing an excellent thing into bad repute.

No one who wouldn't rather work than loaf is in actual need of loafing, but there are really few of us who don't prefer working at something, useful or useless, to doing nothing. And he or she who loves work most requires to learn loafing.

You can't loaf properly if you are worrying over neglected work or anticipated work to come. You must begin to loaf in your mind first of all, letting it work from inside out, until you are loafing all over. Just sitting around and not working isn't loafing. I have seen a woman waiting in the reception room of an office till her turn came to go in to the hallowed precincts beyond, sitting there tense with work, thrashing things over, quivering with impotence, wearing herself out to no purpose at all. Now, if she had studied the art of loafing, she would have had a fine, refreshing half hour and enjoyed herself thoroughly besides.

When you loaf you must be filled with a sense of utter peace, a complete escape from the least notion of labor of any sort, a deep content in the large leisure of the hour. No faintest desire to "make time pass" must be allowed an entrance. "Loaf and invite your soul," goes the saying, but it is rather your soul that invites you. It takes you into the regions of eternity, where time is not, and gives you splendid idle dreams and surrounds you with vast spaces.

What good is there in that? Hardly one American woman gets enough of it. We may be idle, many of us, but we don't know how to loaf. Yet loafing of the right sort creates a calm of the spirit, a composure of the body, eminently good for us. Into our crowded, nervous lives it breathes sweetly, as might the piping of a shepherd from vanished Arcady. A spell of loafing will take the knots and snarls out of your nervous system as nothing else can. It will soothe your irritability and restore your equilibrium.

A woman who cultivates the art of loafing as one of her possessions will be mistress of the secret of perennial youth. Even when she is working her hardest the soothing influence of her just loafing indulgence will extend its balm over her, keeping off the fidgets, giving her a sense of breath and ease.

You can loaf but five minutes or five months, according to circumstances and necessity. It isn't a question of time, but a state of being. But acquire the power to do it when you need it, and life will be a brighter thing to you.

Turtle's Long Sleep.

The cold-blooded creatures hibernate. Snakes knot themselves up under a log or rock; toads, wood frogs and tortoises push down in the soft earth; mud turtles and water frogs bury themselves in the bottom of shallow streams and ponds. They all sleep until hunger wakes them, and the first thing they do in the spring is to hunt for a good meal.

If you want to see something hibernate it is easy to keep a box tortoise or a water turtle all winter in a box of earth and moss with a pan of water on one side.

Before they go to sleep don't forget to feed them every two or three days bits of raw meat or earthworms. They do not care to eat every day and are able to go a long time without food.

A box tortoise which a boy has had in the house for two years went to sleep the first winter just as though he were out in the cold, but the second winter he only took short naps and had become so tame he would eat out of the hand.—From the Churchman.

He Was From the Woolly West.

He was a tall, lanky individual, with his straight-brimmed felt hat pulled well down over his eyes. He leaned against the counter of a confectionery shop, and when a clerk approached him he ordered "angel food." "We have nothing like that here," the girl told him. "Well, then," he said, "let me have a chocolate walnut float." The clerk said she guessed it was a "sundae" he wanted, and the tall man, remembering, said he believed that was what they were called. "I would rather have 'angel food,' though," he added. The girl behind the counter grinned. "Where do you come from?" she asked, pleasantly. "From the woolly west," was the startling reply. Shades of Jesse James and his well-known brothers! The psychic disturbances noted recently in the neighborhood of Cambridge were probably due to the band of spirit outlaws gnashing their teeth and grinding themselves with shooting irons!—New York Tribune.

Explained.

We heard about a woman once who never did her neighbor knock; it seems she dwelt out in the sea, upon a high and lonely rock.

One Disability Removed.

George Washington had written a courteous note to the distinguished British general, asking him to surrender.

Hesitating a moment, he signed it: "Yr. Obt. Servt., G. Washington."

"There was a time," he said, with a whimsical smile, "when I couldn't lie, but I seem to have outgrown that weakness."

WON BY WOMAN'S WIT

CUNNING DECIDES CONTEST FOR HAND OF BEAUTY.

Father Chose Among Many Suitors for His Daughter, but the Girl Herself Took Hand in Final Selection.

There was, once upon a time, a Senegal tailor, who had a daughter as dazzling as the sun. All the youths in the neighborhood were in love with her beauty, and two of them went to her and asked for her hand. The girl, like a well-trained daughter, made them no answer, but called her father, who listened to them and said:

"It is late; go home, and come again tomorrow. I will tell you then which of you shall have my daughter."

At daybreak the next morning the young men were at his door.

"Here we are," they cried; "remember what you promised us yesterday."

"Wait," said the tailor; "I must go out and buy a piece of cloth; when I return you will hear what I expect you to do."

He soon returned, and calling his daughter said to the young men:

"My sons, there are two of you, and I have but one daughter. I cannot give her to both of you and must refuse one. You see this piece of cloth? I will cut from it two pairs of breeches exactly alike; each of you shall make one of them, and the one that finishes first shall be my son-in-law."

Each of the rivals took his task and prepared to set to work under the tailor's eyes. The latter said to his laughter: "Here is thread; you can thread the needles for the workmen."

The girl obeyed; she took the spool and sat down by the youths. But the pretty witch was full of cunning; her father did not know which one she loved, neither did the young men, but, or her part, she knew very well. The tailor went out, the girl threaded the needles, and her suitors set to work.

But to the one she loved she gave short needles, while she gave long needles to his rival. Both sewed zealously; at eleven o'clock the work was scarcely half done, but at three in the afternoon the young man with the short needles had finished his task, while the other was far behind.

When the tailor returned the victor carried in the finished breeches. His rival was still sewing.

"My children," said the father, "I did not wish to show any partiality between you, for which reason I divided the cloth into two equal parts and gave each a fair chance. Are you satisfied?"

"Perfectly," answered they. "We understood your meaning and accepted the trial; what is to be will be!"

But the tailor had reasoned to himself: "He who finishes his task first will be the better workman, and consequently the better fitted to support his household." It did not occur to him that his daughter might outwit him by giving the longer needles to the one she did not wish to win. Woman's wit decided the contest, and the girl chose her husband herself.—Alice Dunner's "Twice-Told Fairy Tales," in Atlanta Journal.

Co-operative Home Making. The most successful families are the ones in which each child has some definite duty in the daily household routine; not a drudging obligation, but a contribution to the general comfort of the family. It is not so much the actual task that is of value, it is the spirit which it fosters. You may fill lamps with revolt in your soul, if it is merely a horrid chore to be got through with. But you may fill lamps with joy in your heart, if you feel that you, too, are doing something for the home. It is the mother's privilege to present that point of view.—Home Progress Magazine.
