Mr. Gardiner of this office last Friday noon found a curiosity, the like of which we confess we never heard of. It is in the shape of a seed from a watermelon, cut open that noon, the seed having a sprout about an inch long attached to it. The melon was fresh and nice, and all other seeds as usual. Can any one tell of a like circumstance?

After a newspaper controversy the school board at Wahoo has decided to have the minutes of each meeting published in the local papers, and paid for by the district. And why not? Taxes for school purposes are now the heaviest that taxpayers bear, and the public is entitled to information showing how the money is spent, not only in large towns, but in all school districts.—Exchange.

We received a pleasant call last Thursday from our good friend, Wm. Young of Boelus, accompanied by an old time friend, Mr. Fred Harling, of Humboldt, this state. The gentlemen are cousins and had not met but once before in the past forty years. They are Englishmen and were boys together in the old country. There is only six months difference in their ages, Mr. Young being 80 years of age this coming December, while Mr. Harling was 79 last July. Both have lived to a ripe old age and are yet hale and hearty and seemingly good for another score of years.

At the meeting of the Missouri Valley Medical Association in Omaha last week Friday, Dr. L. A. Merriam of Omaha was crushed by the steam roller of the association. In the course of the doctor's remarks he dwelt a great deal on the commercializing of surgery and the practice of medicine, saying that 80 per cent of the surgical operations were needlessly performed to extort money from the unfortunate. He spoke of appendicitis and floating kidney as fashionable fads that would have their day. This aroused the ire of the association and at the close of the meeting some one bobbed up and made the motion that Dr. Merriam's paper be not published in the Medical Herald, as is customary with all papers read before the society.

Mr. and Mrs. Sweetland gave a reception last Wednesday evening in honor of their son, Rev. Leslie Sweetland, and his bride, who were here Wyoming for a few days on their way to Bellevue college, where they will pursue their studies for another year. A large number of friends of the happy couple were present to meet them and a choice program of music and readings was given by our talented young people, while refreshments of frappe and wafers and ice cream and cake were served and a very pleasant evening was passed by those present to pay their respects to Rev. Sweetland and his bride, who left Friday morning for Omaha.

Next Year's Seed Corn

Many farmers are wondering where they are to get next year's seed corn. Many can find it on their own land, or can get it of their neighbors, and get higher yielding corn than by sending away. Professor T. A. Kiesselbach of the University of Nebraska has the following to say of the present situation:

"The Government Crop Report has estimated the probable yield of corn in Nebraska at less than 35 per cent of a normal crop. The crop is restricted more or less to certain areas, while large portions of the state will have almost a total failure. This condition calls attention to the matter of seed corn for next spring's planting. The seed corn situation, however, need not be so serious as it appears at first thought. In fact such years as this may be beneficial by way of eliminating all but the more hardy strains of corn within any ordinary variety. If only scattering plants produce ears under the prevailing hardships, it is quite reasonable to believe that these plants are especially resistant and should provide the best kind of seed corn. Even though the ears be small, it is to be recommended wherever possible, that a farmer select seed from his own or neighbor's field. The small size will be due to adverse growing conditions and will not be transmitted to the following crop. At any rate an abundance of seed will be available in Nebraska for our own planting and there will be no need of importing less adapted seed from other states."
