BILL IS COMPLETED EXCEPTING ONE FEATURE.

Final Action by Both Houses Expected at an Early Date Barring Unforeseen Complications.

Washington, D. C .- The tariff bill is a completed document except for the provision taxing trades in cotton futures. After more than two weeks of constant work behind closed doors the eight democrats representing senate and house as members of the conference committee, have settled the last of their other differences and reached the final decision that they could not agree on the cotton future

A completed proof of the conference report will be taken up for revision by the democrats. The six republican members of the conference committee were summoned to meet at a full committee meeting. The formality of submitting the conference report to the republicans is not expected to take much time and it is believed the report will be presented to the house in a short time by Representative Underwood

In the final session of the conference committee, a further futile attempt was made to settle the fight over the cotton futures tax. The senate conferees changed front and agreed to give up the Clarke amendment altogether, but the house members refused to permit this. The senate in turn refused to accept the proposed Smith-Lever compromise, and in the end it was determined to report a disagreement to both branches of congress, and let the senate and house determine what should be done toward regulating or taxing the trading in cotton for future delivery.
