Department of Agriculture Advises Cutting Out of Grades on Highways to Save Horses.

> Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
> The average life of horses and automobiles may be increased and the cost of hauling reduced, according to the office of roads of the department of agriculture, by relocating many old roads and the more scientific laying out of new ones. The natural tendency in road building is to build a straight road, whether it goes over steep grades or hills, or not, and pulling over these grades naturally adds to the wear and tear on horses and vehicles.

The doctrine of the office of roads is that the longest way around may often be the shortest and most economical way home, and that frequently by building a highway around a hill or grade, but little appreciable distance is added and this is more than offset by the reduced strain of hauling.

The chief drawback from the farm owner's point of view is that the laying out of roads on this principle of avoiding grades necessitates, in some cases, running the road through good farm land or orchards or pastures, instead of going around the farm line and building the road through old worn-out fields and over rocky knolls. This, of course, must raise a question in the mind of the individual land owner as to whether the cutting up of his property by a road yields him individual advantages and so benefits his community as to offset the use of such land for a road, or to overcome the inconvenience of having his land divided. In this connection the office of roads points out that the running of a road and the resulting traffic through a good farm, where there are good sheep, cattle, horses, grain, fruit or vegetables, has a certain advertising value and in many instances makes the land more valuable. In other cases, the importance of such a level road to the community is so great that it might well repay those using the road to give the farmer the equivalent in land equally good in place of what he has sacrificed to the common wel-

At any rate, the office of roads is now taking special pains to make clear the economic advantage of avoiding steep grades in other roads, even at some sacrifice of better land. Investigation shows that the laying of such roads over hills has resulted more from attention to the preservation of farm lines than from scientific attention to the problem of road building.

According to the testimony of farmers consulted, where a horse might be able to pull 4,000 pounds on a level road, it would have difficulty in pulling 3,000 pounds up a steep hill. The size of the load, therefore, tends to be measured by the grade of the largest hill on the road to market. In a number of cases actual experiment shows that the re-locating of roads around hills has been accomplished, either with no addition in road length in some instances, and with the adding of only a few feet to the highway in others. The office knows of no case where a properly re-located road which has cut out grades has led to any question as to its material reduction of hauling costs.

THRESHED OATS FOR FOWLS

Bound if Given Too Freely at First -Alternate With Mash.

Threshed oats is fine for fowls, if fed intelligently. They will sometimes produce crop-bound if fed too freely when first fed. Almost any dry, balky rations will produce crop-bound when fed in large quantity. However, oats is a very valuable ration for fowls, but we would prefer to feed it alternately with a mash food made of pure wheat bran, hominy feed and shorts. The standard weight for oats, says the Indiana Farmer, is 32 pounds to the bushel, but it must be remembered that there is no grain so variable in weight per bushel as oats. Ordinarily oats when it approaches the standard weight per bushel makes fins poultry feed. You will find that the fowls will refuse to eat fiber portion of oats-eating only the best of the grain.

Farmer Is Man Most Concerned.

The making of good roads is one of the most important duties of the American people and their prompt rein which the progressive farmer is markets over which he may be able to haul the greatest possible load. Good roads, like all other good things, are too expensive to build and of too much value to be neglected.

even in competition with those beautiful adaptations of the Greek draper ies which are incomparably graceful.

In fact nothing really new has become established so far this season, and we are masquerading in costumes some of which would make our grandmothers and our great grandmothers feel very much at home if they could revisit their earthly abodes.

Many of the new wraps and gowns make no claim to being graceful. They depend for charm on the beauty of fabrics and their suggestion of the femininity of days gone by.

One thing is demonstrated by styles like that shown here, and that is that women stick to the utterly feminine in the construction of their apparel no matter what excursions they may make into the worlds of business and politics. Therefore we shall see them trooping to the polls to vote in the most impractical and unbusiness by Georgette, the wonderful, of Paris, like of clothes. It is the eternal fem-

Unfortunate Gallantry. To his little native town a busy city man recently returned for a visit. As he had not seen the place nor its people for a long time, he was kept pretty busy greeting old friends. Among those whom he encountered was an elderly spinster, who beamed upon him with:

"Oh, Mr. Smith! I am sure you don't remember me!"

"Remember you!" gallantly exclaimed the city man, quite carried away by his wish to be friendly. "As if I could forget you, Miss Dixon! Why, you are one of the landmarks of the old town!"
