

SENT BACK TO KEARNEY

Youthful Forger Passes Worthless Check and Gets Caught.

Donald Comstock, a lad who has been working for R. I. Barrick, passed a forged check for $5 at the Ideal Restaurant one day last week. The check was signed with Mr. Barrick's name, and Mr. Dolling supposed that it was good, knowing that the lad had been working for Mr. Barrick.

When the forgery was discovered the boy could not be found and was not located until a couple of days later when a clothing store man at Grand Island telephoned to the First National bank here, asking whether a check for $25 payable to Donald Comstock and signed by R. I. Barrick, was good. He was informed that the check was a forgery and was told to hold the boy.

Young Comstock made his get-away through a back door of the store while the telephoning was going on. His home is at Comstock and he was placed in the reform school at Kearney several years ago, where he remained for some time. He was apprehended and was sent to the reform school again, this time to remain until he becomes of age.

There will be a dance in the evening and the day will conclude with a grand display of fireworks. Mr. Jenner has had numerous misfortunes this season and it is a safe bet that all his friends will do all possible to make the day a success.

K. W. Zavgreen and bride stopped off on their way to California to see the Zavgreen family on route one the past week. Mr. Zavgreen is a bridge foreman and is located at Omaha. They expect to be gone about one month and see many places besides the exposition.
My Old Patrons on Route One: You don't know how glad I was to drive Route one and see you all again. But there has been so many changes I would not like to come back to stay. I was glad when I saw the fine improvements that have taken place all around the route since I was your carrier. Many of you get to town now in your automobiles or fine carriages, where a buggy or a wagon was good enough. I noticed more than anything else the big improvements in the roads. When I drove route one nine years ago there were miles of roads that had never been worked and some of the hills were nothing but cat steps. Your present carrier has an auto and you ought to do everything to keep the roads in good shape. The little trees I saw you planting then are now big shade or big apple, plum or cherries. he big orchards that were planted then are trees bearing fruit now. These orchards go a long way towards boosting the country.

Sunday night Route 1 was visited with another one of those gully washers and at A. L. Parters' there was a strip of hail about one mile wide and about one-half mile long. It damaged the oats one-third and pounded the corn bad. Clarence Tondarew told the carrier that Monday morning at 10 o'clock there was still some hail where it had been washed in little piles in the road. No wind to speak of accompanied the hail. Had there been nothing would have been left. A very heavy rain fell, as much as four inches in places. The storm traveling in a southeasterly direction striking Ed Flynn's, Bichel's, Peterson, Behrens, Kuhl's Jerkewicz, McBeth's and Knoepfel's. From Ed Flynn's east it seemed to gain force and the crops were from one-third to almost totally destroyed along this line. This is hard luck as the wheat is almost ready to cut and the yield is going to be big this year. One thing about this storm it was narrow, confining itself to a strip not to exceed one mile. In this storm Litchfield did not get any rain and Loup City only one-quarter of an inch. Brown creek and Cob creek were running bank full. The river rose Monday afternoon showing that a heavy storm had taken place to the northwest some fifty miles. The report is that hail fell in sizes all the way from a pea to as large as a baseball.
