Don't Poison Baby.

Forty years ago almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labeling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without your or your physician's knowledge of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. Concerning Women on Juries.
"Do women have to sit on juries if they vote?" Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, president of the National American Woman Suffrage association was recently asked.
"Not necessarily," said Doctor Shaw; "but I have seen a lot of juries which needed to have someone sit on them, and I have known women who have had to stand up at most difficult and disagreeable employments who would be glad to sit on juries and receive about double the price they get by standing. And these men and women who prey upon the virtue of girlhood and boyhood would rather face Satan himself than a jury of mothers. Yes, we need women on some juries."

How to Clean Stone Window Sills.
In the Woman's Home Companion a Missouri woman told as follows how to clean stone steps or stone window sills:
"Get five cents worth of the coarsest sandpaper and rub stone steps or stone window sills briskly until all marks are removed, then simply dust them with a duster or a rag. They will stay white much longer by using this method than scrubbing them with water. I always wear a pair of canvas gloves, as they protect the hands from any scratching."

SEALS ACT MUCH LIKE SUBMARINE

HAT airships, gliding planes, and aeroplanes have been suggested to man by the flight of birds is well understood by us. That the deadly submarine of our present maritime war has been suggested to us by any form of natural animal life is not so patent. Doubtless it has often been in the minds of fishermen and whalers when tempest tossed and severely driven. Certainly it would be a happy ship for them that could be so constructed which would safely dive with all on board to the quiet depths below, there to rest content and easy until the "clouds rolled by" above.

We have come to regard the soaring albatross or the condor as the prototype of the aeroplane. When we look for a natural model for the submarine we find it well made in the body of the fur seal and fully suggested by its method of progression in the sea. For it travels there only when wholly submerged.

Unlike, however, the "Unterseeboot," the fur seal is not fitted for swimming on the surface; it only rises there to survey, to breathe, and to sleep; it never attempts to swim with head above water on any course, no matter how short. It rises, when undisturbed or not alarmed, looks about with head and neck well stretched up above the surface of the sea, fills its lungs with air (literally compressed), turns its head down, and with its powerful flippers, drives it below the surface to the depth of five or ten feet, then ahead on that level; thus submerged, the body of the seal glides through the water as swiftly as a swallow in the air—it is a vanishing streak to our eyes.

How long it remains thus submerged when traveling, no one has any definite knowledge, but the best consensus of opinion gives it a rise at intervals of every three or four minutes to breathe—that is, a pause of less than two or three seconds with barely more than its nose and eyes above the surface, for exhalation and renewed inhalation—when down goes the trim body to speed ahead again.

When our submarines were first brought out to trial of more than 300 miles from base was the utmost limit of their cruising. Today, they have been so perfected by the Germans that we know they can cruise safely more than 3,000 miles from that base. Therefore, in this connection it is interesting to know that the fur seal makes a submarine journey in the North Pacific ocean of more than 5,000 miles from its base on the Pribiloff islands in Bering sea, and then returns.

An animal which can not only make such an extended journey, but can steer its course over an uncharted waste from point to point, month by month, with positive regularity and in perfect time, must be a fine type of swimming machine—it is.

There is to be observed a close resemblance between the cigar-shaped submarine boat, and the body form of the fur seal. As we view them laterally, this resemblance is complete; they are both driven ahead by feathering screws, and they are both kept on the level of their submerged course at a given distance below the surface by rudders.

Then we observe that the periscope, to which the submarine craft owes all its efficiency, is duplicated exactly by the seal's nose and eyes, and which are all that ever lifts above the surface when startled, and in flight or passage.

Again we note that the fur seal as President Wilson tells of a famous Princeton professor who supplied the pulp of one Sunday in the hamlet of Penn's Neck.

Desert Lighthouse.
Prairie schooners, as the long canvas-covered wagons which cross the deserts of Arizona are called, are guided by the only desert lighthouse in the world. The lighthouse marks the position of a well, the only place where water can be found for 23 miles to the eastward, and 30 miles in any other direction.

Many a wayfarer in this vast, waterless region has died of thirst practically within sight of the well, the whereabouts of which he was ignorant. It was a tragedy of this sort which led to the erection of the beacon. A boy, perishing of thirst, had fallen in the last stages of exhaustion. When night came, he noticed the light from the well keeper's cabin burning dimly in the distance. With a last heroic effort, the boy reached the cabin. This gave the well keeper an idea, and now every night a light flashes out from the only desert lighthouse in the world.—American Boy.

The Way It Goes.

IVORY ABSORBING MOISTURE

The average person does not associate ivory as an absorber of water, but this quality of the product was brought out in a customs case, says an exchange. The American Express company entered ivory, which it claimed had absorbed moisture on the voyage from Africa. Collector Malone's men weighed the product and found that it exceeded the invoiced weight by a fair margin. The collector accordingly took duty on the weight found after the ivory had been unloaded from the vessel. When the ivory was later weighed at the factory of the ultimate importer the weights were lower than those returned by the government officials and approximated the weights contained on the invoice. When the question came before the board of general appraisers, Judge Waite did not attempt to decide whether ivory is an absorbent of moisture, but held that the importer had failed to prove his case. So the question remains an open one.

Invaluable Searchlight.
The electric searchlight is now considered as essential to an army as to a battleship. All the armies of Europe have portable searchlights, the French having brought them to an especially high degree of perfection. The field searchlight is usually carried on one motor truck and the generator on another, a quick connection being made by means of wires. This modern searchlight may be placed in a most exposed spot, and both operator and generator kept in a sheltered position.

Extinct Ground Sloth.
The remains of an extinct ground sloth found in Patagonia and brought to this country by Mr. Roosevelt is now in the American Museum of Natural History in New York. These remains possess extraordinary interest, because the surroundings in which they were found seem to prove that the animal was living only a few centuries ago, and was not only contemporary with primitive man, but was to some extent domesticated by him. Previous to this discovery it had been believed that all the great ground sloths of South America, of which many fossil remains have been found, became extinct thousands of years ago. The remains recently found were discovered in a dry cave, in company with tools or weapons of stone and bone, together with bundles of grass spread as though intended for fodder. There were other indications that the animals had been stabled or imprisoned in the cave and fed by their captors.

Less Than Human.
Tom, the country six-year-old, presenting himself one day in even more than his usual state of dust and disorder, was asked by his mother if he would not like to be a little city boy, and always be nice and clean in white suits and shoes and stockings. Tom answered scornfully; "They're not children; they're pets."—Harper's Monthly.

"That confirms the claim that they are going to continue a stout fight."

5 Women Avoid Operations

For years we have been stating in the newspapers of the country that a great many women have escaped serious operations by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it is true.

We are permitted to publish in this announcement extracts from the letters of five women. All have been recently received unsolicited. Could any evidence be more convincing?

- HODGDON, MR.—"I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached and I was so nervous I could not sleep, and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation, but I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman."—Mrs. HAYWARD SOWERS, Hodgdon, Me.
- SHELBYVILLE, KY.—"I suffered from a severe female trouble. My right side hurt me badly—it was finally decided that I must be operated upon. When my husband learned this he got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me, and after taking it a few days I got better and continued to improve until I am now well."—Mrs. MOLLIE SMITH, R.F.D., Shelbyville, Ky.
- HANOVER, PA.—"The doctor advised a severe operation, but my husband got me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I experienced great relief in a short time. Now I feel like a new person and can do a hard day's work and not mind it."—Mrs. ADA WILT, 303 Walnut St., Hanover, Pa.
- DECATUR, ILL.—"I was sick in bed and three of the best physicians said I would have to be taken to the hospital for an operation as I had something growing in my left side. I refused to submit to the operation and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and it worked a miracle in my case, and I tell other women what it has done for me."—Mrs. LAURA A. GRISWOLD, 2437 East William Street, Decatur, Ill.
- CLEVELAND, OHIO.—"I was very irregular and for several years my side pained me so that I expected to have to undergo an operation. Doctors said they knew of nothing that would help me. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I became regular and free from pain. I am thankful for such a good medicine and will always give it the highest praise."—Mrs. C. H.
