

Professional Men and Women of Loup City

Our Doctors and Nurses Are at the Head of Their Profession

There is no man who comes so near the heart and lives of the people as the dear old family doctor. He is in the home in the times when some loved one is hovering near the valley of the shadow of death, and when he brings them safely back to the bright sunshine of life, he has earned the eternal gratitude of the family. He hears all the troubles both great and small, and his ready sympathy never fails.

The pioneer doctors of Sherman county have seen troublesome times. Ever ready and willing to go when called, it has been no small undertaking to serve the people through the early years.

Dr. A. J. Kearns is our oldest doctor, now, and he came here in the latter 80's. He knows the trials of the country doctor. He knows what it meant to travel this country over, long before the time of telephones and automobiles.

DR. CARRIE L. BOWMAN

He was ever ready and willing to go when needed, and he endeared himself to the people for his ready sympathy and kindness, and when times were hard as they often were in those days, he shared them with his people.

"A man he was to all the country dear." And passing rich on forty pounds a year.

And now his pioneer days are over and he can take life more comfortable. With the full assurance of duties well done.

Dr. Main, too was here before the automobile made its advent in the west, and has come to be quite widely known. And now since he has acquired a Ford, he reaches his patients quickly, hands out his pills and powders, and gets back to town in less time than it would have taken some one to come for him a few years later.

Dr. O. E. Longacre came to Loup City in 1907, having bought the practice of Dr. J. H. Long. He is noted for giving the bitterest doses any patient ever took. It is hinted that he never takes his own medicine, which no doubt is the way of all doctors. He spent some time in the Philippine Islands, and knows something of the stern realities of life as lived in the tropical climate.

The Drs. Bowman began the practice of medicine in Loup City in 1912. While very new in our midst, they have proved their worth to the public. The people have learned to know that when they hear a buzz and see a streak, that is only Dr. J. E. in his jockey on a hurry call. Dr. C. L. with her happy smiling face brings a breath of cheer to the sick room which goes a long way toward reaching the end she wishes to attain.

One of the noblest of callings is that of a physician. To alleviate the sufferings of humanity, these people make many sacrifices for the good of mankind. Loup City certainly has a splendid corps of physicians, and we should take our hats off to them, and not forget that a kindly word of encouragement and appreciation will be welcomed by them.

MRS. W. P. TAYLOR

Mrs. W. P. Taylor is a graduate nurse and has been located here for five years. She has proved a valuable aid in many cases of sickness and accidents and is kept busy most all of the time. Mrs. Taylor graduated from the Omaha General Hospital Training school for nurses in June, 1909 and spent one year as head nurse in the operating room at the Wise Memorial hospital in Omaha.

Loup City's Attorneys

JUDGE AARON WALL

The profession of law is well represented in Loup City. The pioneer lawyer is A. Wall, or Judge Wall, as he is sometimes called, having been county judge at one time. He came to Sherman county in her earliest days. He has braved the trials and tribulations of the pioneer of the west, and is well known to all the country round. As a criminal lawyer he has been especially successful. His power of oratory has moved the sternest jury to tears and won him many cases, and much renown.

J. S. PEDLER

J. S. Pedler is another of the pioneers of the county, having been in turn, blacksmith, sheriff, lawyer, and banker. He has served the county in the capacity of county attorney as well. A graduate of the "University of Hard Knocks," he has received his full share of bumps, but through it all has been able to come out on top, and could now retire from active life, but the habit of work has become too great a factor in his life, and he is seen daily wending his way toward office, or court room with his law books under his arm.

R. P. STARR

R. P. Starr claims Loup City as his residence but his legal business takes him away from home much of the time. He has been in Loup City for several years and is quite well known having been in politics a few times.

He devotes his time and energies in damage suits against railroads, and has become quite proficient in his line of business. His natural talent for oratory and his splendid use of the "King's English," makes his pleas for his clients so forceful that the cold-blooded, hard-headed corporation is touched and moved to deepest sympathy and its purse strings opened, to the mutual benefit of client and lawyer.

R. H. MATHEW

Robert H. Mathew is one of Loup City's products. Born and reared to manhood in the community, he has a host of friends and needs no introduction. He received his education at Nebraska University and soon after being admitted to the bar was elected county attorney, which office he filled two terms. He is also the only abstractor in the county and his law duties, with his other work, keep him very busy. He has a bright future before him and will make his mark in the world. His friends all know him as a practical joker, and if they find guanine in their popcorn or electricity in their door ever delving in the volumes of Cobbe and Blackstone, and when in the future you hear of great things of him, remember he is a Sherman county product.

knobs or chairs, they arrive at the conclusion that "Rob" has been there.

L. L. STEPHENS

L. L. Stephens, born and raised on a farm near Rockville, is another of Sherman county's boys to make good. But recently graduated in law from the State university, he is serving his county in the capacity of county attorney. Of a studious nature he is

JOHN W. LONG

John W. Long is a member of the Sherman county bar. Commercial law is his specialty and the fact of being a lawyer has assisted him greatly in his business. Though not actively engaged in the profession of law he is well read and no occasion could find him unprepared.
