Thought-of-the-week

Do unto others as you would have them do unto you.

*****

Sarge: Hey! you get up, don't you know you can't sleep after reveille.

Private: I could if you didn't make so much noise. (C. B.)

S. M. W. asked me to experiment a bit on

"What if"

What if Richard Holcomb had short legs.

What if the Omaha Teen-Agers didn't come to the Christmas party.

What if Susie Mae Whitehall was tall.

What if LeRoy S. Wells comes back here to live.

What if you had $100.00 dollars to spend for Christmas.

What if Betty Boman was fat.

What if there wasn't any school.

What if Mattie Sue Nevels went to U. C.

What if Mary Bass didn't always have chewing gum.

What if Billie Mosby was short.

A World of Books

By Mrs. Edith Hickman

At Christmas time, children as well as grown-ups will want Christmas stories.

Dicken's Christmas Stories—3 great stories:

The Story of the Other Wise Man—a message of faith and courage.

The Night Before Christmas—loved by everyone.

The Fireside Book of Christmas Stories, reminds us of what Christmas means.

The Life and Adventures of Santa Claus.

Certain books seem very suitable at this season of the year.

Tell me more about Jesus—for little ones.

Illustrated Book of Favorite Hymns—words and music.

A Little Book of Singing Graces—illustrated.

Hear Our Prayer—children's prayers.

Prayers and Graces—for small children.

Here are books with something to do.

Animal Color Book.

Outline Pictures to Color

Every child's Tracing Book.

Jolly Times Tracing Book.

The older children will like things to make.

Easy to Build models of war-planes.

Boys Fun Book—10 suggestions.

Dolls to make—for fun and profit.

Children reach an age when they develop a curiosity about many things around them. Often parents cannot answer these questions which should be answered. These books help.

I Wonder How—a little book of knowledge for the eight to sixteen ages.

So That the Reason—for both grade and High school age.

Science Stories—for young children. It leads them into the world of thought and discovery.

A Dipper Full of Stars—A study of the sky for Junior High School pupils.

There are many books concerning other lands which tell about life there. These awaken interest in other children and create a better understanding between the peoples of the world.

Little Boy Dance—a lost little boy in Mexico.

Beggar Boy of Galilee—He lived near the sea, and his father was blind.

Young Folk of Americas—About children of North and South America.

Cave, Castle and Cottage—Adventures in many lands. Boys and girls who no longer need to have stories read to them will like books that they can read and find interest for themselves.

Fermune's dog stories increase our love for dogs.

Treve—a collie who lived on a ranch.

My Friend, the dog—short stories about dogs.

Bruce—a dog who went overseas.

Horse stories, too, are a delight to young readers.

Game-legs—story of a great horse.

Top Horse of Crescent Ranch—story of a horse and a boy.

Dapples of the Circus—A shetland pony and a boy.

Black Beauty—an old favorite.

Chateau Des Mirandes Where Josephine Baker Rests, Is A Thing Of Beauty

By Edgar A. Wiggins

SARLAT, France—(ANP)—The beautiful Chateau des Mirandes, 10 miles away, in the valley of Dordogne, southern France, is the current retreat of Miss Josephine Baker, here to recuperate from a recent attack of dysentery. The 41-year-old American-born singer-dancer had departed Paris for an extended rest cure at the request of her physicians.

Here amid the fabulous wealth of furniture, old and new, she is striving to regain her health. For one hour during the afternoon each day, she leaves her bed and strolls through the garden and park of her vast estate and drinks in the beauty of the surrounding countryside and the winding river that flows lazily in the valley of Dordogne.

Her chateau is a large 36-room museum-like affair, containing everything from oriental rugs and tapestry, to art objects of all sorts and descriptions, made out of oak wood and gold. Paintings, etchings, books, engraved silverware, dinner and liquids served in silver and gold are all contained within the castle's four walls. Add to that five grand pianos, one of which is gold, and her endless wardrobe of divine clothes and chests of priceless jewelry, and you have only a part of the multitudinous fortune surrounding her. Why, even one of the large fireplaces in the chateau staggers the imagination. Any one of them would hold 20 standing men, with head space to spare.

During the war, prior to the Nazi invasion of Paris, Monsieur Robert De Loird former head of the French 2nd bureau in southwest France and also member of the underground movement, engineered the systematic evacuation of all Miss Baker's furnishings from Le Vesinet home near Paris, to the village of Sarlat. These were distributed among villagers who felt privileged and honored to conceal these articles until the time came when the Germans were moved out of the country.

With Miss Baker and her Italian-in-laws, Dr. and Mrs. Filippo Scotto, an Italian cook, and Jean, 37-year-old chief gardener of the estate and his wife, who is Miss Baker's chief maid.
