Georgia (Continued from page 1) ask the supreme court to reconsider its decision.

Thompson, in a statement from his offices in an Atlanta hotel, said the decision upheld his belief "that the will of the people as expressed by their ballots should prevail."

HIS OFFICES were thrown into an uproar over the decision with well wishers rushing in and telephones ringing with congratulatory messages.

The court decision was written by the presiding Justice Henry Duckworth. Chief Justice W. F. Jenkins and Justice Tom S. Candler filed a dissenting opinion.

The majority opinion held that the death of Herman's father, Eugene Talmadge, after his election and before publication of the returns by the legislature did not alter the duty of the legislature to declare his election, nor did it authorize the legislature to declare that because of his death no person had a majority of the votes and to then proceed with election of an alternate.

"ACCORDINGLY," the majority held, "where in such circumstances the general assembly undertook to elect another person as governor, namely the honorable Herman Talmadge, such attempted election was a void act, which did not confer upon him any right or title to the office of governor."

"It follows that upon the resignation of Governor Arnall on Jan. 18, 1947, M. E. Thompson, the duly qualified lieutenant governor, became vested with full executive powers of this state."

THE SUPREME court thus moved to end nine weeks of political turmoil in which rival governors occupied the capitol and contended for control of state agencies and departments. —Lincoln Journal

McMillians

Mrs. Willena V. McMillian, B. S. told the Mary Bethune Literary and Art Club and their guests of a three way program sponsored by the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Mission. The War time restrictions on travel found the educational and religious workers in America, the McMillians assumed responsibility of all three.

Mrs. McMillian told in her charming way of the miraculous way the natives learned to be nurses, doctors and home makers in spite of their limited back ground. She told of their loyalty and devotion to duty.

An African Collection of the McMillian's is on display in the museum at Morrill Hall, University of Nebraska.

GIRL SCOUTS

Thirty-Five Years Old

As the Girl Scouts close the observance of their 35th year, their slogan seems more significant during this year of social and political changes than at any time during the entire 35 years.

"Better Citizens Build a Better World" is the slogan and theme for the 35th Anniversary of Girl Scouting in the United States. It's timely and telling, for it places emphasis upon Girl Scouting's major purpose—the development of character and citizenship.

Howard University continues to have the largest enrollment among Negro colleges, with 5,000.
