Omaha Club addressed by Washington

Living is an important responsibility, but too many of us are afraid to face the brutal realities connected with it and seek ways to evade them, Charles Washington told members of the Omaha Forerunners Club, Wednesday noon. He was the third and final speaker on a series of discussions on the theme "Successful Living" sponsored by the club. He spoke on "Meeting the Issues Involved".

It is true that "Life is likened to a gamble", Washington stated. "It is true that there are many chances and uncertainties attached to it; but there are certain things we can do to be sure we don't 'Crop Out' before we make our point."

"I have just learned, after living 23 years, that unless we face life with sincere and square approach, we can never make any gain toward a happy and successful life," he continued.

He said too many of us spend time analyzing the lives of others and fail to inspect the imperfection of our own life. "We are all guilty of this gross error," he asserted. "I'm going to start spending that time to work out a solution to my life."
