How to Remove Stains

Attempts to remove stain should be made as soon as possible. In any case, it must be treated before exposed to hot water and soap. It is often more economical in the end to send blouses and dresses to a dry cleaner rather than experiment with the removal of spots at home.

Before using any chemical on a stain, test an inconspicuous part of the material. Pour boiling water from a height of 2 feet. If stains remain bleach with lemon juice or sun light.

FRUIT STAINS

Sponge immediately with water. If stain remains send to cleaners.

MILDEW

Bleach with Javelle water, then launder. Old mildew is almost impossible to remove. Alternate applications of oxalic and potassium bichromate.

SCORCH

When scorch is light, dampen it and place in sun light. Bleach with hydrogen peroxide if necessary. If scorch is light, apply hydrogen peroxide; then rinse immediately. Deep scorch cannot be removed. other childhood diseases. Be on the safe side.
