Lincoln Urban League Host To Educational Caravan

An educational caravan composed of 64 young women, 4 young men, and two couples touring the country by bus will arrive at the Lincoln Urban League Friday, August 29, about 2 o'clock.

The group is a part of the National Associated Clubs organized by the National Urban League in Indianapolis two years ago, and are returning from the coast.

The young people left Indianapolis in July, and will also stop in Grand Island.

Mr. Clyde W. Malone, Executive Secretary of the Urban League, stated that the young women would be housed at the Urban League, and places would be found in homes for others.

A tour will be conducted thru the city and a meeting will be held as a part of the Urban League's program of research and community planning. The group will leave Saturday morning.

Prejudice may be considered as a continual false medium of viewing things, for prejudiced persons not only never speak well but also never think well, of those whom they dislike and the whole character and conduct is considered with an eye to that particular thing which offends them.

Negro Piano Prodigy, 3, Plays Bach, Mozart

Chicago, Ill.—Margaret Rozarian Harris, 3, made her debut Sunday as a classical pianist and drew prolonged applause from her audience.

The tiny Negro girl, her favorite doll perched in a chair next to her piano, played 14 serious selections from the works of Bach, Schubert, Tschaiakowsky, Mozart, Brahms and other composers.

Just three weeks short of her fourth birthday and wearing a white satin dress with a pink ribbon in her hair, Margaret appeared before an audience of more than one hundred persons in the Cary Temple Auditorium.

She bowed from the waist as she calmly looked over the audience before seating herself at the piano, equipped with raised pedals for her little legs.

She plunked a few keys, then swung into Bach's minuet. Playing entirely from memory, she followed "The Magic Flute" by Mozart.

She played Tschaiakowsk's "Song of Russia" to introduce the second half of her recital. In the midst of "Ave Maria," she yawned audibly but never missed a note.

She received a rousing ovation at the end of her recital. Then she picked up her doll and ran to her mother.

Margaret showed a spark of temperament a few hours before her debut. She wasn't nervous about the recital but was a little irritated because her mother wouldn't let her play with the doll.

She and the doll, Rozarian, were dressed alike for the concert. Her mother, Mrs. William Harris, said she didn't want her daughter to get the doll "mussed." "She just won't play without Rozarian," Mrs. Harris said. "She never does."
