Girl Denied Entrance Into Nursing Schools Because of Race

PHILADELPHIA. (ANP). An 18-year-old girl who wants to be a nurse at a time when hospitals, the Red Cross and the armed services and other agencies are begging for nurses this week found herself unable to get into a nursing school in this city because she is a Negro.

Miss Pauline Jackson, 18, of Germantown, a graduate of Downingtown Industrial school, is the girl who cannot go to school.

Her first rejection came from the Women's Homeopathic hospital, a state institution with a 95 percent Negro patients role. Although Miss Jackson passed the entrance exams to the Temple hospital school she received the following letter from Lelah M. Sitterly, director of the school:

"We regret to inform you that we do not receive Negro students but we may take this opportunity to inform you that the schools

Greetings Gates:

This week finds me puzzled on what to write for TAC, but this is where I arrived.

Nolen Davis is coming along fine in football this year. He had a lot to do with The Links winning the game with Sioux City Friday night, for he made one of the two touchdowns that won the game.

Well, from the looks of things, Joyce Williams should be our next bride because she was the lucky girl to catch the bridal bouquet Sunday at the wedding of Miss Jackie Farr and Gwen Tarpley.

Billy Rutherford has returned after spending quite a few months in the Coast Guard (He looks real sharp in his uniform), and as you know Loretta McWilliams is thrilled as much as another girl I know. Is that right Vonna?

It looks like Jean Burns and Frank King are making time fast. They are seen together quite frequently lately. "Most mad."

My Dear Sweet Lorraine,

This is just a note to say Let Me Love You Tonight, because Since I Fell For You, I'm just Long Gone, and when I told those Little White Lies and you said Run Joe I caught the Late Freight so now I'm writing to say Send For Me if you need me. But if you can't do that, Write Me a Letter or Am I Asking Too Much? So Bye Bye Baby for now.

Love Jim.

LaVanda Roger Hill left recently for Langston, Okla., to attend Langston university. He has taken up a three year course in shoemaking. We all hated to see him leave.

which are listing below accept Negro student nurses.

"We recommend you especially to the Lincoln School of Nursing, one of the best schools of nursing in the United States, where only Negro students are accepted."

The letter listed a number of eastern schools and then closed: "I hope you will find the above satisfactory, and that you will realize your ambition to become a registered nurse. Lelah M. Sitterly, R. N."

Miss Jackson then applied to the Jewish hospital and the Chestnut Hill hospital. The Jewish hospital told her that "only a qualified number of Negro nursing trainees would be accepted by the school, selecting only those of high scholastic standing."

The quota at this school was 30, and had been filled until September, 1949. Chestnut Hill told her that it was filled over "a period of time extending over several semesters."

Miss Jackson is still hoping to go to a nursing school.
