THEME—Psalms of Trust. Psalms 34; 37; 46; 91; 138:3, 7a; 143:8.

The Quality of the Psalmist's Trust. The trust which the Psalms selected for today's study express was not the result of a care-free and sheltered existence. In every one of them is the note of hard-earned triumph over adversity.

This poor man cried, and the Lord heard him, And saved him out all of his troubles.—Psalm 34:6.

The wicked have drawn the sword, and have bent their bow

To cast down the poor needy.—Psalm 37:14.

Therefore will we not fear, though the earth do change, And though the mountains be shaken into the heart of the seas.—Ps. 46:2.

Thou shalt not be afraid for the terror by night, Nor for the arrow that flieth by day.—Psalm 91:5.

Here are songs of a faith that has been tried as by fire and has been refined and strengthened by the ordeal. It is a faith which has grown not by escape from battle but by victory in one conflict after another in which its power has been proved and its sufficiency established. In these Psalms there speaks a trust which answers to Kirsopp's definition of faith as "not belief in spite of evidence, but life in scorn of consequence."

How to Have Singing Hearts. In our home we have recently acquired a canary. While he is supposed to be a singer, to date the only time he chooses to sing is when the vacuum cleaner is running. He seems to require an outside stimulus to give him a singing heart. Many human beings are like the little canary; they are constantly in need of something from without to keep their hearts singing.

Do we wish to have a singing heart? The key is in our own hands with which to unlock the door to happiness. If we submit our lives wholly to Christ, trust Him in all things, "casting all your care upon Him; for He careth for you," He will give us singing hearts.—Earle M. Hand in The Secret Place.

Another use for clothespins. Here's one for school children... Have them carry a clothespin to school. When they remove their rubbers or galoshes, they can clip them together. This enables each child to locate his own easily.
