Teaching Our Children To Enjoy Themselves

Annie L. Gaetz National Kindergarten Association

We are living in a materialistic age, and, in our zeal to have our children develop abilities with reference to material needs, there is grave danger that we might allow the spirit of good-natured fun to become stifled. A cheerful disposition is a greater treasure than much riches. It helps on every occasion. Besides being a comfort to the owner, it is contagious. The child to whom it belongs is likely to be popular with his playmates, and in later years-if his character is as good as his dispositionhe usually can be assured of a welcome at any gathering. Employers, too, appreciate a happy disposition in their employes.

The time to cultivate a happy disposition is in childhood.

Too many people make the mistake of putting aside all pleasure as "foolishness" and stressing only the work, which they believe to be all-important. When they do this they are missing one of the most precious blessings that life offers and an asset which, if rightly sought, is easiest to obtain. After the bare necessities of life, what the family needs most is good, old-fashioned fun. Indeed, we would not be far wrong if we classed fun as one of the bare necessities.

Many children Don't cramp childhood. who associate almost exclusively with older persons never learn to enjoy themselves, and in later years they feel that their childhood was sadly lacking. They never were children in the true sense of the word. As adults they usually become the "wallflowers" at social gatherings. Instead of doing all possible for their own and other people's enjoyment, they fail utterly to enjoy themselves and prove a source of worry to those responsible for their entertainment. They cannot enter into the fun, for they have never learned to play.

· However we are situated, we should not allow any phase of harmless pleasure to escape the notice of our children. We should never allow life's joy to remain a sealed book to our family. There is a mental development-yes, and a spiritual development-in games and other home amusement. The remembrance of such childhood games as blindman's buff and hide-and-seek remain in our memories long after a theater play or a public social has been forgotten.

We should do our part to make our children's lives round and full; no avenue for good should be allowed to remain closed. One of the best ways to help our boys and girls to build well-rounded personalities is to encourage them to find wholesome pleasure and amusement-always such as in happy accord with their duties -under whatever circumstances they may be placed.

Illinois Ends Bias In National Guard

SPRINGFIELD, III. (ANP) Gov. Adlai Stevenson last week signed a bill opening all divisions in the Illinois National Guard to all citizens regardless of race, creed or color.

By making this policy law, Illinois becomes the fourth state to pass such legislation this year. Others states with such laws are Connecticut, New York and Wis-

Rep. Charles Jenkins of Chicago, one of the assembly's four Negro members, introduced the bill to the state legislature May
