Baldwin to Resign

NEW YORK. (ANP). Roger N. Baldwin, director of the American Civil Liberties union since it was founded in 1920, will resign Jan. 1 to devote full time to specialized work in the field of international rights, it was announced last week.

According to John Haynes Holmes, chairman of the agency's board, Baldwin's resignation was attributed to the "increasing concern of the union with the relation of the United States to the problems of international standards of civil liberties.

He will devote part of his time to the International college for the Rights of Man, the committee of international civil liberties and the committee on American colonies.

America's Need of Comfort. Our own country is much in need of a comforting message today. There are so many signs of unhappiness in America. If we look at the world of industry we are reminded of the factory in Mr. Priestly's book. We have splendid machinery, highly effective management, great hosts of skilled workmen. This vast industrial organization is one of the bases of our national strength and those who work at it are as truly soldiers of the commonwealth as any man in uniform ever was. There are fellow workers in the great cause of demonstrating that a democratic society can give to its members abundant means for securing the richest life as far as material things can help. Industry ought to be a great happy family.

But what do we find? Management and labor are at chronic war. Both are guilty of putting selfish profit above the public welfare. Each party is justified to some extent, not a small one, in its suspicions of the other. Neither labor nor management has yet fully learned the lesson that the only way to happiness in industry is to work together unselfishly, not merely for wages and profits, but for the welfare of the republic. This is the only message which will bring comfort to the sorrows of industry.

Utopian? Impossible? Wild idealism? Or is it simply the Christianity which we profess but do not put into practice? Did not Jesus say, "Take heed and beware of covetousness"? Did He not say, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you"? Until we take Him seriously there will be no peace and no happiness in the world of industry.

Or take America's homes. Juvenile delinquency, the appalling number of divorces, are not evidences of happiness in the American home. When he spoke to the Princess Elizabeth and her husband at their wedding, the Archbishop of York with impressive simplicity told the royal couple that the secret of a happy marriage was in the unselfish sharing of life together in mutual self-giving. Petty aims, small ambitions, these destroy all chances of happiness in the family. Where are Americans to find a way to that happy dedication of their homes to high and worthy ideals in which husband and wife, parents and children, can find a common goal and a lasting bond of unity? Surely the church has a message which will bring comfort to this great area of unhappiness.

New School For Richmond

RICHMOND, Va. (ANP). Plans for a new $2,500,000 high school to replace the overcrowded and inadequate Armstrong high school were completed last week.

The new building is to be modern, and will contain all the necessary facilities for efficiency.

Final plans have not been made for the old Armstrong school when the new one is finished. It has been reported, however, that it will be used for an elementary school or junior high school.

CMEs Send Two Missionaries To Study For Work In Brazil

Christianity begins at home but it does not stop there. For forty years the CME church has had interest in foreign missions and was among the first Negro denominations to send a missionary to Africa.

The late Dr. John Wesley Gilbert accompanied Bishop W. R. Lambuth, of the ME Church South to the Belgian Congo and established missions among the Batetela tribes. Dr. Gilbert, one of the first students at Paine college, was the denomination's first missionary to foreign fields.

Nearly 40 years later, Dr. E. C. Peters, president of Paine college, announces that again a Paine college student is the first CME missionary to go to Brazil. Mr. Emmett DeVerne Steele and his wife, Henrietta Rivers Steele, sailed for Brazil on September 22.

They will spend their first six months in further language study at Campinas, Brazil, and later begin their missionary work at Granberry institute, Juriz de Fora. Mr. Steele will be engaged in recreation, while Mrs. Steele will serve as social worker.

They both come from historic Trinity church, Milledgeville, Ga. He became interested in missionary work while serving overseas in the army. He made special studies for missionary work at Latin American institute, Chicago, and Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Ill. Mrs. Steele is a graduate of West Virginia State and received training in Social Service at the University of Chicago and has been a case worker in the Chicago Department of Welfare.

This enterprise will mark the renewal of the joint missionary enterprise between the Methodist church and the CME church which started 40 years ago and will stimulate the present movement for a missionary commission into Africa.—Christian Index.
