Rummage Sale June 15th

The Church of God in Christ will sponsor a rummage sale today, according to Mrs. Effie Johnson. The sale will be held at the church parsonage 2006 U street, at 2 p. m. Mrs. Robert Lane is chairman.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitney Young and daughter, Marsha, were in the city Sunday. Mr. Young, executive secretary of the Omaha Urban League, was guest speaker for a Men's Day program held at Quinn Chapel. The Rev. John Adams in Lincoln to hold a third quarterly conference at Quinn Chapel, returned to Omaha with the Youngs. He, a trustee of Wilberforce university, has just returned from an annual meeting held there.

The Rev. W. I. Monroe, pastor of Mt. Zion Baptist, observed Children's Day with a special sermon. A large audience was in attendance.

Teen Age Chatter

By Eloise Finley.

Hi Teens:

There seems to be a lot happening now-a-days in Lincoln.

First of all, Sunday, June 4th, there was a gathering at the Finley home. It was given for Connie and David Wilson from Hastings, Nebraska. Among those attending were Doris and Birdie Powell, Robert Hutcherson, Cecil Hatcher, Audrey Brooks, Ernestine Burns, Charles Finney and a few others. The evening was spent informally.

Monday, June 5th everyone was enjoying the nice summer evening.

Tuesday, June 6th I sang for a women's club in Huskerville, Ionna Adams was my accompanist.

Wednesday, June 7th were a number of Lincolinites rooting for the Independents at Munny park.

Thursday, June 8th was the dreaded day when quite a few students started back for some more summer school. Those attending are: Mary Lou Knowles, Norma Dunn, Vonna Finley, Albert Bowen and Florentine Crawford and many others. Good luck to all of you.

Friday, June 9th Vonna Finley celebrated her 16th birthday.

Also Friday, June 9th, a number of teens were seen at the Urban league. Among them were Peaches Winston, Eddie Baugh, Bettie Rose Huston, Emma White and Victor Brown.

There are two more boys from Omaha that come to Lincoln. They are Ronald Managers and Eddie Baugh.

So Long,
ELOISE.

Scottsboro Boy

By Haywood Patterson and Earl Conrad.

Nearly 20 years ago, nine Negro boys were jerked unceremoniously off a freight train at Scottsboro, Ala., and accused of the rape of two white hobo girls. "Scottsboro Boy" is the story of what happened to these youngsters, aged 13 to 20, of their trials, their sentences, and their imprisonment.

The story is told in the words of Haywood Patterson, one of the group. The writing is that of Earl Conrad, for many years a newspaperman, one-time editor of the Chicago Defender. The style is dramatic, with the dynamic expressiveness in many places of Richard Wright's "Native Son."

Although the tale drags on, seemingly interminably, it maintains interest because of the incredible prison conditions it relates. Atrocities pile on one another. Animals receive better treatment than Patterson claims is accorded to Negro prisoners in Alabama's "Jim Crow" jails and prison road camps.

Documentary statements augment most of the claims regarding the trials and sentencing. There is plenty of room for doubt whether "due process of law" applied in their case.

Patterson escaped from the prison camp after serving nearly 18 years of a life sentence. He now waits in his room "somewhere up north" for either freedom or the law to claim him. Judging from the way he tells the story, one-sided as it must be, it is no wonder that the subtitle of "Scottsboro Boy" is "The Story that American Wanted to Forget."

Egg Spread Sandwiches

White and whole wheat bread, thinly sliced
Butter or vitaminized margarine, softened
Jar of tangy spread
Hard-cooked eggs, finely chopped
Toothpicks
Cucumber pickle, thinly sliced
Parsley

Cut off bread crusts. Spread both slices with butter or margarine. Spread white slice of each sandwich with tangy spread. Sprinkle egg liberally on whole wheat slice of each sandwich. Put white and whole wheat slices together. Cut with sharp knife from corner to corner. Cut each triangle in half to form smaller triangles. Spear with toothpicks, if necessary, to hold together. Garnish with cucumber pickle and parsley.

Notes of Interest

Visiting Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Patrick is Mrs. Edna Jackson of Los Angeles, Calif., and Mr. William Patrick, of Grand Island, Neb., brother of Mr. Arthur Patrick. Hostesses at a Memorial Day picnic dinner in honor of Mrs. Edna Jackson and Mr. William Patrick were Mrs. Mary Burden Davis, Mrs. Marie Copeland and Mrs. Arthur Patrick. Other guests invited were the Burden brothers: John, Will and Joe and Joe's son Hershel, Mrs. Copeland's daughter Marlene and Mrs. Francis Thoman and daughter Janet from Omaha, Nebraska. The picnic was at the Patrick home.
