The character development of Mark is one that may be duplicated in our knowledge of leaders today. His story is one of encouragement for the faint-hearted but sincere Christian worker. It shows that though Mark fell short in his early ministry, he later made good, overcome his faults, regained his courage and served Christ with usefulness and joy. Phillips Brooks was once called a failure. He tried teaching school as a young man and was unable to maintain discipline in his classes. He was dismissed and told that he would never be good at anything. Later, after studying theology, he became the pastor of a church and was a success as a preacher, with his congregation growing until his church was packed every Sunday. We are told that there were no tricks about his oratory, it was just the outpouring of his soul, a soul fired with the love of God and devotion to his cause. Here is encouragement for us all. We should try again if we fail. It is possible to rise above failure and succeed.

that the state and the law of the state provide equally comparable facilities in all lines of college activities at the colored normal, industrial, mechanical college at Orangeburg."

The school did not reveal the names of the applicants or the dates of their requests for admission.

State law prohibits enrolment of Negroes at "any state-supported institution of higher learning other than the Orangeburg school.

Honored For 50 Years In Beauty Culture

CHICAGO. (ANP). Mrs. Annie M. Turnbo Malone, founder of Poro Beauty college and originator of numerous hair products, was honored here last week with a three day program at various churches and at Poro college.

Praised for her 50 years of service in the field of hair styling, Mrs. Malone was guest of honor at a number of testimonial mass meetings, teas, and dinners.

Prof. James A. Mundy, noted Chicago musical figure, introduced lyrics to a new song, "Hail Her Name! Annie M. Malone!" Sung to the tune of "Bless This House," this creation eulogizes Mrs. Malone.

Opening program was held at Poro college. Ald. Archibald J. Carey spoke as a representative of the citizens of Chicago in honoring Mrs. Malone. The Rev. Lillian E. Scott explained the history and purpose of celebration.

The Rev. Joseph M. Evans, Metropolitan Community church; Miss Rosetta Gardner, YWCA; Oscar C. Brown, Sr., Mrs. Dixie Brooks, and Mrs. Alva Delaney delivered greetings for the ministry, the professions, business, and other groups.

Program for the second day included open house at the college and a banquet at Metropolitan Community church. The Rev. C. Baker Pearle, pastor, Bethel AME church, spoke, and John M. Ragland, executive director, South Central association, served as master of ceremonies.

Mrs. Wendell E. Green, wife of Judge Green, addressed the big mass meeting on the final day of the celebration. Mrs. Annie E. Oliver was mistress of ceremonies. Final event of the celebration was a reception at the Poro Gardens on the college campus.

Mrs. Oliver served as general chairman of the celebration program, and Rev. Scott as secretary.

Mrs. Malone entered business in 1900 with her office and factory in a $5 a week back room in Metropolis, Ill. In 1902, she moved to St. Louis where she reached her zenith with a large college, a good factory, and agents all over the United States. Later she moved her college to Chicago.
