Secretary-General Trygve Lie Makes Report to Organization

By Sampel P. Perry, Jr.

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y.—(ANP)—UN Secretary-General Trygve Lie has reported in his annual report of the organization that activity of the UN within the framework of the International Trusteeship system created by the charter.

The scope of the Trusteeship system has expanded geographically with the placing under it, provisionally, of the former Italian colony of Somaliland. Eight Trust Territories in Africa and the Pacific have been visited by the periodic missions of the Trusteeship council, of which Dr. Ralph J. Bunche is senior director.

In the past year, it is revealed, there has been a further large flow of petitions from several Trust Territories, particularly under the stimulus of those visiting missions, bringing the council invaluable first-hand accounts by the inhabitants themselves of their own problems and aspirations.

The Trusteeship council has also been fully occupied, in the course of its fifth, sixth and seventh sessions, with such other important functions as its examination of the annual reports on the administration of the trust territories and with special matters referred to it by the UN General assembly.

Former Mayor Making Strong Congress Bid

By C. Goolsby

Clarence G. Miles, who resigned recently as mayor of Lincoln, is making a strong bid in the First Congressional District of the state for the seat which has been held by Carl T. Curtis of Minden.

Mr. Miles, a graduate of Cotner College and the Harvard Law School, served in the first War and then returned to the district where he has practiced law for more than 30 years. He left the mayorality because he did not feel that Nebraskans in this district were being represented in Congress as they ought to be. He opposes Mr. Curtis primarily on American defense and American economic security measures.

As mayor, Mr. Miles was a strong proponent of low rent housing in Lincoln, a matter that is still a vital problem of Negroes and non-Negroes alike, he has always been willing to listen to complaints of injustices against the people, and has included Negroes among those named to the Mayor's Advisory committee on civic improvement.

Mr. Curtis's record will not be considered liberal by Negro voters. He voted to restore veto powers to the House Rules committee so that FEPC bills could be kept from the floor. After FEPC was brought to the floor of Congress, he voted to substitute the weak measure for the original. He has also opposed middle income housing legislation, voted for the Kerr natural gas bill to raise gas rates in Nebraska, voted against extension of rent control, aid to Korea, Point 4 (aid to African, Indian and "backward" areas), but voted for an amendment to permit commodity speculation during national emergencies.

Mrs. D. L. Shakespeare, 71, died Tuesday at the home of her son, Rev. Marvin L. Shakespeare, 2225 S.

A resident of Parsons, Kas., for many years, she came here to live after her husband died last January. She was a native of Parsons, and a member of Quinn chapel, A.M.E. church.

Besides Rev. Mr. Shakespeare, two other sons survive. They are Daniel L. Shakespeare of Kansas City, Mo., and David S. Shakespeare of Lincoln. Other survivors include a sister, Mrs. Lucy Ann Hudson of Detroit, Mich., one nephew, A. C. Marris, Lincoln, and two grandchildren.

Junior Red Cross Seeks to Work Without Regard to Race or Creed

By Lois S. Johnson

WASHINGTON. (ANP). The principle of service is as American as "democracy" or "representative government." Yet the idea cannot be taught by precept alone. Young people must be encouraged to make this American virtue a part of their lives through daily practice.

To help teachers accomplish this, a laboratory for service is available through the program of the American Junior Red Cross in the schools. During 1950, over 19,000,000 young people enrolled for service in over 95,000 elementary and secondary schools in the United States—public, private, and parochial.

Universities Share Funds

ATLANTA. (ANP)—Tuskegee institute and Meharry Medical college this year will share $256,000 in funds from the Southern Regional Education program, it was announced here this week.

Total funds allotted to member schools, both colored and white, are $782,500. These funds are allotted on the basis of $1,000 per student for veterinary medicine training and $1,500 per medical or dental student.

Meharry and Tuskegee at present are the only Negro schools participating in the program. Attending these schools are 182 students compared to 402 attending white schools participating in the program.

Tuskegee has been awarded $27,000 for the education of 27 students in veterinary medicine. Meharry has been awarded $67,000 for 47 students in dentistry and $162,000 for 108 students in medicine.

White students enrolled in the regional education program total 115 in dentistry, 134 in medicine, and 153 in veterinary medicine. Some 14 white schools are co-operating with this program.

The participating states contribute to the program on the basis of the number of students they send to these schools.

Progress in Education

The University of Virginia, founded by Thomas Jefferson, will admit its first Negro student this fall. Virginia's historic segregation barrier was lifted by a three-judge federal District Court, which ordered the University to admit qualified Negroes to its graduate school of law. Judges John J. Parker, Morris A. Soper and John Paul granted the injunction after a 30-minute hearing.

Gregory Swanson, a practicing attorney of Martinsville Virginia was denied admission to the University last July because he is a Negro. At that time the Attorney General of Virginia, J. Lindsay Almond, Jr., advised the Board of Visitors that if Swanson chose to contest refusal of his admission the University would be unable to defend itself, in view of the recent Supreme Court decision. The court decreed that Swanson or "any other Negro similarly situated" could not be denied admission because of his or their race or color to the department of law, under rights secured by the Fourteenth Amendment to the U. S. Constitution.

In North Carolina, meanwhile, Judge Johnson J. Hayes, of the U. S. District Court for the Middle District of that state is studying a similar case of 10 Negro students seeking admission to the Law School of the University of North Carolina.

Dean Irwin Griswold of the Harvard School, testifying for the plaintiffs, told the Court that he had personally examined the facilities at North Carolina College for Negroes and found them grossly inferior to those of the State University.

25 CAMPAIGNS IN ONE
GIVE ENOUGH FOR ALL
LINCOLN COMMUNITY CHEST
OCTOBER 18 TO 28

Through the international program of Junior Red Cross, they joined hands in a common effort for mutual good with some 33,000,000 other Junior Red Cross members in 55 countries around the world.

Service activities of Junior Red Cross are three-fold: local, national, international.

Classroom work takes on additional meaning when children can do something for others while they are learning. Articles for children and adults in hospitals and other institutions are made in home economics, industrial or fine arts, and other classes.

As a part of the school curriculum, courses are available in Red Cross first aid, water safety, and home nursing. Such knowledge can be a real service to the community in its daily life or in time of disaster.

Nationally, Junior Red Cross members constantly provide service to the armed forces or to veterans hospitals by the production of special comfort and recreation articles or holiday favors. They use their music or dramatic classes to prepare entertainment for military and veterans hospitals.

In their social studies classes, they learn about life in other sections of the United States through an exchange of school albums with schools in those sections.

Internationally, Junior Red Cross provides a unique opportunity to assist in stimulating understanding and good will among young people throughout the world. The filling of thousands of gift boxes (over 500,000 during the school year 1949-1950) has become a traditional Junior Red Cross program.

By these small tokens of good will, bonds of friendship are strengthened. As a supplement to the gift boxes, high school members fill school chests with educational, health, and recreational supplies for schools abroad.

Through international school correspondence, class groups prepare albums for exchange with schools overseas. Another activity, which aims to interpret American life, that has proved popular with art teachers, is the International School Art program. In the third year of its existence, over 6,000 pieces of art work have been shipped to 18 countries.

Although limited in scope, the International School Music program aims to interpret the musical life in American schools by recordings. Through voluntary contributions of boys and girls, the National Children's fund is constantly providing quantities of much needed health and school supplies.

Nov. 1-15 are the dates set for the annual Junior Red Cross enrollment campaign in the schools. Enrollment is open to all elementary and secondary schools—public, private, and parochial.
