Draft Rejects High in South

ATLANTA, Ga. — Forty-six percent of the thousands of Southern youths passing through induction centers are failing to come up to service standards, including 38.7 percent who can't qualify mentally, a survey disclosed Saturday.

Aroused Southern leaders, including new South Carolina Gov. James F. Byrnes, have investigated the problem of wholesale rejections and found its roots in the limited education of boys 19 through 25. Those with high school education are accepted automatically if not otherwise unqualified.

A North Carolina county made an intensive study of its draft rejection cases, and reported that the education factor was complicated by too much stress on reading facility in the examinations. As a result, the Pitt County, N. C., report showed, skilled craftsmen with poor reading comprehension were rejected while college men were drafted as laborers.

Governor Byrnes was alarmed to learn that South Carolina had the highest rejection rate of any of the Southern States, with 65.3 percent of its youth turned down, including 60.7 for flunking intelligence tests. The figures covered July through October.

Several states reported cases of youths deliberately failing their mental tests, but the Army usually spots these ruses and "accepts" the flunkers anyway, draft officials said.

Americans Fighting in Korea Get Much-Needed Writing Kits

Korean areas suffering from a shortage of stationery supplies found a friend in one of the world's largest brewing companies. Stationery portfolios, like the one pictured here, are now being distributed by Special Services of the Army to all Air Force, Navy, Marine and Army personnel in Korea. Servicemen listed writing paper as one of their top needs.

Archibald S. Alexander, under-secretary of the Army expressed

"deep appreciation on behalf of our servicemen in Korea," in his letter of acceptance to Harris Perlestein, president of the Pabst Brewing company.

Front cover of the portfolio contains the reminder "Don't Forget To Write Home." The kits serve a double purpose in supplying writing paper to men who had little or no paper for their letters. It will enable them to write home oftener, assuring parents and relatives of more frequent contact with our forces in the Far East.

Returning veterans of the Korean conflict stress mail to and from home as the most potent morale booster to the nation's fighting men.

Chicago's Miracle Girl Is on Road to Recovery

CHICAGO (ANP) — Chicago's "miracle girl" who came back alive from a rigor mortis condition was declared to be well on the road to recovery this week by physicians at Michael Reese hospital.

After unwrapping bandages from her arms and limbs and finding no trace of gangrene, the medical men reported Mrs. Dorothy Mae Stevens chances for recovery excellent and that she was not likely to lose any digits, feet, or arms. However, a number of blisters were found which will make skin grafting operations essential.

The 23-year-old woman, who a week ago made medical history by surviving the lowest temperatures ever recorded for survival, now fully conscious, found out also she was a very popular heart on St. Valentine day. Hundreds of valentines from well-wishers throughout the nation flooded into her hospital room, included was a bouquet of flowers from California.

Aside from the unexpected shower of valentines, Mrs. Stevens was asked to appear on television. She winked and smiled to millions through the WGN-TV cameras, and was pictured being fed soft foods, and conversing with her special nurse and the staff doctors.

Another very pleasant event of the week was the making-up with her husband, Johnny L., who now visits her every day along with her father, Norvell Taylor.

When told of her good luck in not having any amputations, the attractive, larged-boned woman exclaimed: "Thank God! I'll never touch another drop of liquor as long as I live."

After all the excitement of the good news, reconciling with her husband, valentines, rebandaging, and television, Mrs. Stevens' blood pressure was slightly higher than it had been, 184 over 110. Her temperature was 101; pulse, 108, and respiration, 24. Doctor's declared there was no need for being alarmed for the patient will continue to spend all her time resting and taking nourishment for days to come.

Mrs. Stevens' story is unique. Last Thursday morning she was brought into Michael Reese hospital literally frozen stiff by police who had found her lying in a gangway at 3108 So. Vernon on Chicago's southside. A normal thermometer would not record her body temperature, but a chemical one showed it to be 64. She was breathing three to five times a minute. The normal is 18 to 22. Her pulse registered 21 compared to the normal of from 70 to 80 beats a minute. Her blood pressure was zero, and her heart beating once every five seconds. A hospital spokesman described her appearance as similar to a slab of meat placed in a home freezer. He stated her blood had congealed into a mud-like sludge.

Physicians attempted to thaw her out by administering the new drug cortisone. An incision was made in her throat, and a tube inserted to facilitate respiration. After plasma was given to liquefy the blood, doctors left her uncovered at room temperature to reduce too rapid a thawing which would have caused a fatal shock.
