Atty. George D. Hornstein, committee chairman, state that its members believe the Celler bill avoids conflict with states rights by establishing a cause of Federal action against lynch mobs on grounds other than assault and murder. "Lynching constitutes murder and assault and these crimes are punishable under all state statutes," he explained.

He pointed out that under the Celler bill, prosecution of lynch mobs could be undertaken only if it were shown that the lynchings were because of race, color, religion or national origin, wherein a protection guaranteed by the Constitution would be violated.
