A Queen In the Nation's Capital

By ALICE A. DUNNIGAN
WASHINGTON—(ANP)—Her Majesty Queen Juliana of the Netherlands expressed her interest in social work and admitted that she had not seen enough social work in this country.

Chatting informally with the women of the White House press at the Netherlands chancery, the Queen, like all other women, discussed clothes, her children, her work, her mother, social conditions, and her people's welfare.

She told the press women that her three-day schedule in Washington had been too full to permit her to look into the social welfare of that city.

Her greatest concern seemed to have been with the refugees of her country. This is a serious problem, she said, which "urgently needs joint cooperation of all free nations if it is ever to be solved."

She stated that millions of displaced persons in her country still live in camps because they have no money and nowhere else to live due to the housing shortage.

Hello Folks—How is the cooking situation?—You know what? I understand that my recipes are too expensive, have you tried the recipes? Oh well, file them away for a later day. The Government is getting it all now, but we'll have our day.

Well, let's try some custards.

Caramel Pudding
Heat 1 quart milk, lacking 1/2 cup, with 1 tablespoon butter in top of double boiler. Smooth 3 tsp. cornstarch in the 1/2 cup milk; then stir it into the hot milk; cook until thick. In an iron skillet melt 2 cups granulated sugar; when deep brown in color (not burned) add to the hot milk and flavor with 1 tsp. vanilla. Serve cold with whipped cream.

Coffee Custard
Strain through a cloth 1 cup freshly-made strong coffee; add 4 tbsp. moist brown sugar; stir. When sugar is dissolved, add 1/2 ounce of gelatine, melted in 2 tbsp. warm water. Chill. Before mixture sets, fold in with metal spoon 1/2 pint whipped cream. Pour into serving dish. Top can be decorated with whipped cream if desired.

Dainty Custard
Beat 6 egg whites, add 1 cup powdered sugar, 1 tsp. melted butter, 2 cups sifted flour and 3 cups milk (milk added alternately with the flour); flavor to taste. Beat all smoothly together and bake 20 minutes in quick oven. Cool. Custard should be transparent and delicate. Serve with cream.

Cocoa Souffle
Blend 1 tbsp. butter and 2 tbsp. flour. Add 1 cup milk and stir over fire until thick. Mix 2 tbsp. cocoa with 1/2 cup sugar and add to thickened milk. Add 4 egg yolks, one at a time, beating well after each. Fold in 4 stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into buttered baking dish, sprinkle thickly with powdered sugar, and bake in moderate oven for 25 minutes. Serve at once with slightly beaten cream, sweetened and flavored with vanilla.

Lemon Snow
Put 1 envelope gelatine in 1/4 cup cold water and dissolve in 1 cup boiling water. Add slack 1/2 cup sugar. When sugar is dissolved stir in 5 tbsp. lemon juice. When thickening starts, whip mixture into 3 stiffly beaten egg whites. Continue to beat until thickening starts again, then rapidly stir in vanilla or ginger wafer crumbs and pour into dampened pudding mold. Chill thoroughly. Serve with whipped cream.
