To the Graduates

By RUTH SHINN
Executive Director

University of Nebraska YWCA

You have invested time and effort in a course of study intended to "educate" you. I hope for you at this time of graduation that you have:

- ...more than facts, a way of continuing to learn
 - ...more than skills, understanding
 - ...more than knowledge of right and wrong, a joy in knowing and serving God and your neighbors.
- Further, I earnestly hope that our city will take full advantage of the ability and training you have to offer in appropriate employment and community responsibility.

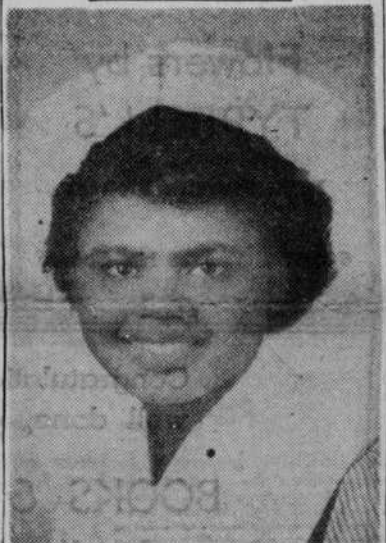

Dr. Weymuller Speaks to Grads

Dr. C. A. Weymuller Saturday afternoon told graduating seniors of the University of Nebraska College of Medicine and School of Nursing they "must be critical of yourselves and of your profession."

Dr. Weymuller, Professor of Pediatrics at the State University of New York, spoke at the college's commencement exercises in Joslyn Art Museum.

Chancellor R. G. Gustavson conferred degrees, diplomas and certificates upon 148 graduates:

Dr. Weymuller stated: "You have been educated to be critical by our University, and you must never relinquish this attitude. Of all people, you who now enter the health sciences as a career must be critical—but in a constructive, progressive manner. "You must be destructively critical only when some real threat to the integrity of the health sciences appears."

Freddie L. Powell

Freddie Louise Powell, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. R. H. Powell, 526 North 22nd St., was among the 148 graduating seniors of the University of Nebraska College of Medicine and School of Nursing in Omaha. Miss Powell was the first Negro student to gain entrance to the Nursing School. She also received her Bachelor of Science degree. After graduation Miss Powell will work in the University hospital.

962 Degrees Conferred at Nebraska U

Degrees were conferred upon 962 students at the University of Nebraska eighty-first annual commencement held Monday, June 2, in the coliseum.

The class compares with 1,180 a year ago and 1,661 in 1950.

Eight students were graduated "with high distinction," highest honor the University can bestow upon a graduate. They are: Mary Ann Beck, Wayne; Steve A. Eberhart, Bassett; Ralph W. Kilb, Lincoln; Warren I. Rasmussen, Central City; Dorothy E. Smiley, Omaha; L. Bonney Varney, Broken Bow; Miriam S. Willey, Winnetka, Ill., and Clayton K. Yeutter, Eustis. The eight were selected on the basis of outstanding scholarship and aptitude for their chosen professions.

The University granted honorary degrees to five persons: Henry A. Jones, Principal Olericulturist of the U.S. Department of Agriculture; Ruth O'Brien, assistant chief of the U.S. Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics; George P. Luckey, president of the Hamilton Watch Co.; J. P. Guilford, University of Southern California psychologist, and Trygve H. Lie, Secretary-General of the United Nations. All are graduates of the University of Nebraska except Mr. Lie, who graduated from the University of Oslo, Norway.

Mr. Lie was the commencement speaker. He told the graduates that the United Nations, despite its successes and failures, is still the world's best hope for peace.

Among the graduates were:

Doctor of Philosophy . . . Arthur Cortez Shropshire, St. Joseph, Mo. B.Sc. in 1930, Lincoln University (Missouri); A.M. 1951 . . . School Administration, Secondary Education, Educational Psychology and Measurements.

Bachelor of Arts . . . Howard Marvin Bean, Lincoln.

Bachelor of Science in Education . . . Otis Bernard Edwards Jr., Lincoln.

Bachelor of Architecture . . . Willis Leland Palmer, Cheyenne, Wyo.

Military Commission . . . Maurice L. Russell, Second Lieutenant.

After going through the flood emergency in Omaha this spring, the new Girls State governor, Florence Goodwin of Omaha, has adopted flood control as her pet legislative project.

In her inaugural address at the 11th annual Girls State, she called for passage of flood control legislation, and pointed to her party's stand as favoring the Pick-Sloan plan.

She called Nebraska's roads "shameful and a hindrance to our further growth as a state."

"Far-sighted" legislation for the improvement of Nebraska's schools was also called for.

Florence, 16, is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Goodwin. Her father is an evangelist and has worked with churches in eastern Nebraska.

In addition to the inauguration which highlighted the day's ac-
