Sentence Sermons

REV. FRANK CLARENCE
LOWRY FOR ANP

1. One certainly cannot expect to reap a bumper crop of life's blessings when inferior seeds are sown that can't even pass ordinary testings.
2. Mother's pies, and even sauerkraut tasted better than any bought, because she knew just what to put in, and what to leave out.
3. To little of the right, and too much of the wrong thing, rob many men of blessings that could make their souls ring.
4. When a man seers his conscience in an effort to get ahead, he is only adding to his long, remorseful hours ahead.
5. The building of human lives is perhaps man's greatest task, because he wants to do it carelessly, as well as fast.
6. But more technique is required than for the construction of an architectural pile; for much prayerful meditation is impera-

Sunday School Lesson

GOD PREPARES A LEADER
Scripture—1 Samuel 1 to 4:1.
Memory Selection—The child Samuel grew on, and was in favor both with the Lord, and also with men. 1 Samuel 2:26.

Present Day Application
By Bishop Frederick D. Jordan
Los Angeles, Calif.

Again we come face to face with the question of the influence of the home. Parents are important people with a great responsibility. Without good home training the good training of the Sunday School may avail little. Judges today decry 'parental delinquency' as the prime factor in juvenile delinquency. Our court records today are filled with the stories of young men and women who are the product of the modern home. A home in which godlessness reigns supreme, where the rum-pus room with its bar has taken the place of the family altar with its worship center; where the radio and television blare continually their crime stories and comics. The only literature is the funny books and current "love Confession" magazine, the decanter has replaced the fruit bowl on the buffet. This is the picture first, then it is that of the broken home. In each case it is the children who suffer. What kind of a home do you have?

tive to build a life free of prejudice and guile.

7. Foundations for such lives should be started early, and after being laid strong and deep, must be of the best material, and nothing considered that is cheap.

8. The average builder of a life today, starts to build in his own way; copying some faulty parts of his neighbor's plan, though he knows the specifications cannot stand.

9. The "me too" way won't build an eternal structure; for uncertified materials give way under pressure.

10. God wants men and women who do not blush to speak His name, and who sacrifice to put the best into their spiritual structures by hard work and sincere aim.

11. Putting the best into life is leaving out every scintilla of strife and imitating Christ who stood alone, that every man might finally inherit the riches of His throne.

12. How unworthy then should we all feel, to even have a chance at this throne to kneel, and ask forgiveness for the wrongs we have done; then start a brand new building for the Father and the Son.

OUTDOOR NEBRASKA

By
DICK H. SCHAFFER
NEBR. GAME COMMISSION

Now that fishing is in its annual summer slump, we began reminiscing with fellow sportsmen and came up with these unusual stories, all of which are true.

No. 1 is about the "lasso" fisherman from Benkelman — Robert Merklin. Three years ago, Merklin was fishing for catfish in the North Platte diversion canal. His line had two hooks. Marklin felt a nibble and jerked the line. He began bringing in the line and realized he had a fish. He did, too, but the fish was not hooked. It instead was lassoed. The line was wrapped around the stomach of the fish. What apparently happened was that as the fish nibbled, Merklin jerked the line. As he did this, the upper hook flipped around the leader, forming sort of a slip knot. When the line was reeled in, the loop tightened around the body of the fish. The fish was a 13-inch catfish.

Occasionally, employees of the Game Commission have an opportunity to hunt. On the last day of the season a few years ago, Glen Foster, supervisor of fisheries, went after the ring-necks in southcentral Nebraska. It was about 10 minutes before closing time and Foster had an empty bag. A ring-neck flushed from the end of a corn field. Foster shot his double barrel .410. The pheasant shot straight up into the air and then came down, settling into the corn. Foster didn't know whether he hit the bird or not. Foster was amazed a few seconds later when the pheasant flew straight up — a considerable distance into the air — and then flew toward him. It glided closer and then came down but five feet away. The ring-neck just stood there. Foster walked toward the pheasant and picked it up. It made no effort to get away. Later, when cleaning the bird, Foster could find no trace of the shot. It apparently grazed off the head of the bird and stunned it.

An unusual combination of birds was reported to the Game Commission by a resident of University Place living near 48th and Adams. The duo consists of a blackbird and a quail. The two have been inseparable companions for weeks. The blackbird is apparently the "bird in charge" as his efforts are duplicated by the quail. If the blackbird flies up into a tree, the quail follows it. If the blackbird flies down and begins feeding, so does the quail. Apparently both became detached from their own species and sought companionship.

Leavenworth prison is in Kansas.

5,000 at CME Quadrennial Youth Conference

ATLANTA (ANP)—More than 5,000 delegates and visitors attended the Fifth Quadrennial National Youth Conference of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church here last week.

Bishop A. W. Womack, of the 8th Episcopal District, embracing host Georgia, said the quadrennial youth session was the largest in the history of the connection.

The conference and convention of CME Sunday School superintendents and Epworth League presidents were held on the campus of Gammon Theological Seminary and Carver Vocational School.

Under the general theme "God Designs — Together We Build," youth delegates received inspiration and instruction from a large number of top leaders under direction of Dr. B. Julian Smith, of Chicago, general secretary of the CME Board of Christian Education.
