Saul was, when chosen, "a choice young man, and godly." His humility upon being chosen was great, and his dependence upon God noteworthy. What a man does after a great event in his life makes a very good commentary upon his stability and worth. When the strains of responsibilities and the temptations of power crowd upon him, there is ever the possibility of a spiritual lapse. Only a continual spirit of unselfishness, of loyalty to God and the people one is serving, will make for success. Promotion should not prevent spiritual advance, but on the contrary increase spiritual depth. Do you know leaders today who have become drunk with power, or those who lose their "balance" because of the material success they enjoy? The end thereof is certain—let nothing change you. Do not let prosperity or power turn your head. Keep your hand in God's.

"I pray not that Men tremble at
My power of place, and lordly sway;
I only pray for simple grace
To look my neighbor in the face
Full honestly from day to day."

—James Whitcomb Riley

Monday, Aug. 11, is S-Day for sportsmen of the state as the Nebraska Game Commissioners will convene in Lincoln to set the hunting and trapping seasons for Nebraska. Several hundred thousand sportsmen will view with great interest the long awaited announcement of the Game Commission.

Months of hard work, involving Game Commission biologists, field men and wardens; 65 cooperating mailcarriers, and 364 wildlife reporters will come to a fitting climax as their respective findings will be presented to the Commission.

A seven-day hunting season on bucks, a season of similar length amount equal to 100% of his contract.

As an evidence of good faith in submitting a proposal for this work, the bidder must file, with his proposal, a certified checked made payable to the Department of Roads and Irrigation and in an amount not less than two hundred fifty (250) dollars.

The right is reserved to waive all technicalities and reject any or all bids.

Jane Molden Ace Pitcher For Blackbirds

Courtesy Lincoln Journal-Star

Jane Molden, whose abilities as a softball pitcher are well known to Lincoln fans, wowed them back at Princeton, too.

Miss Molden, who pitches for the strong Lincoln Blackbirds, is back in town after taking her master's degree in religious education from the Princeton Theological Seminary, where she did everything from singing in the chorus to serving as secretary of the student council.

The 40 girls in the seminary (women's enrollment is limited to that number) there are 400 men) had their own softball team.

One day they smacked down a seminary men's eating club team—the Benham club—with Jane pitching the victory.

She claims the men lost because they were overconfident, but overconfident or not, the Benhamites were so impressed that they made her an honorary member—first woman so honored in the club's history, which dates back about 200 years.

That paid off in eating invitations from the club, swarms of valentines around Feb. 14, and the like.

Jane first tried pitching as a high school girl in Weeping Water when she saw an illustrated newspaper series about a softball pitching star. She imitated his form.

"I threw to my brother, who used to stand against the garage door and bat," Jane recalls.

That brother, Howard (Smoky) Molden, is a well known pitcher in Nebraska semipro baseball circles.

Jane acquired a good fastball in those workouts. She used a on does and a trapping season on beaver have previously been announced. The dates, however, have not been selected. These will be made at the S-Day meeting.

All other hunting and trapping seasons, excepting waterfowl, will also be set and announced that day. The Commissioners will make a selection of waterfowl season as offered by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife service which will announce the official season at a later date from Washington, C. C.

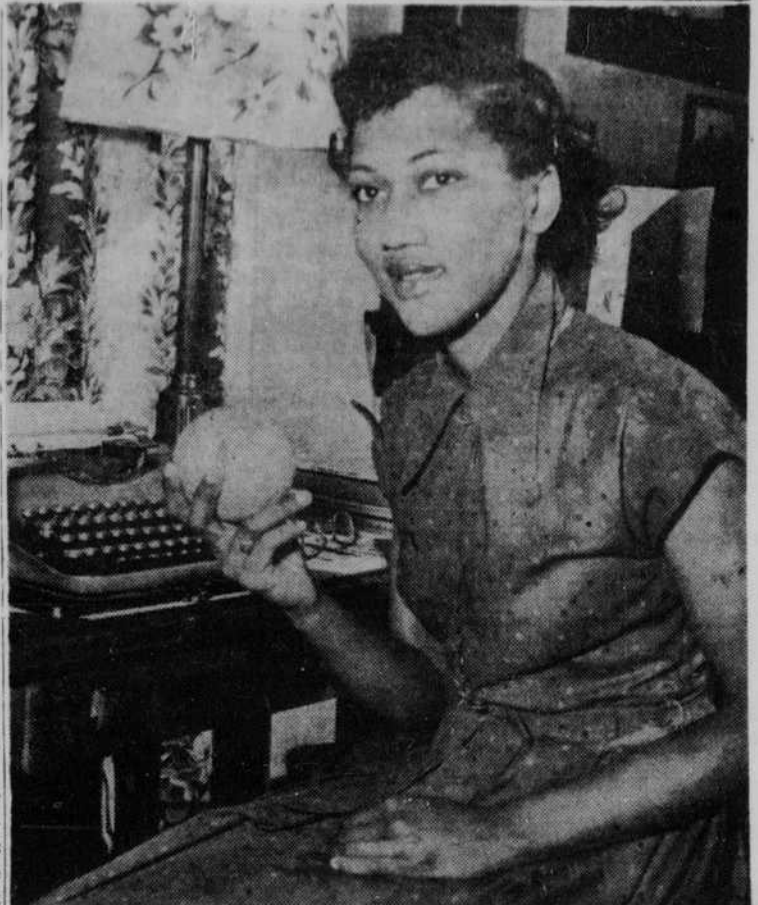

Many sportsmen have wondered as to why the Commission refrains from setting the seasons until mid or late August. Foremost reason is that this time permits the Game Commission to make a complete check on the reproduction of game species and consequently can informatively best regulate the harvest.

men's pitching box, for which she moved into a girls diamond, where the distance from pitcher's box to plate is just 38 feet, those pitches fairly across the plate.

Jane organized and managed a Camp Fire team. In 1942 she pitched Weeping Water to a 2-1 win over the Blackbirds.

The manager, John Martin—who still has the team—knew a good hurler when he saw one. He asked Jane to join his team for the state tournament—which they promptly won behind Jane's pitching.

Jane, who attended Schaeffer College and Western Reserve University in Cleveland before going to Princeton, hasn't had much time to play with the team the past few years. But this summer she's managed to work in quite a few games. Now 26, Jane is still the scourge of Lincoln girls softball circles.

and her pitching—in between summer religious education work—has been instrumental in keeping the Blackbirds unbeaten in city play this year.

She's just finished counselling, teaching dramatics and helping with the recreation program at a Congregational summer camp for 159 junior high youngsters at Doane College.

The Moldens now live in Lincoln. Jane is the daughter of Mrs. William Molden of 2117 T and the late Mr. Molden.
