

Negro Has Featured In Campaign Smears

WASHINGTON, D.C.—“The Big Smear” so currently being used in the Presidential campaign is nothing new nor is it being used as viciously as historians recall from years past.

It's an old, old technique based on the premise that if the lie is big enough, someone is bound to believe it.

The “Negro” smear has been attached to several Presidential aspirants in years past. Both Eisenhower and Stevenson are getting their share of mudballs. How much they will contribute to the victory or defeat of either in the coming election is moot. But the mud-pies are flying, nonetheless. The technique is nothing new. It's just an old political custom and modern times haven't “refined” it in the least.
