

The Veteran Asks:

(This service is based on questions asked at Veterans Administration Offices in Nebr. Answers are supplied by VA).

Q—I'm planning to convert my NSLI term policy to permanent endowment insurance. If I'm still living at the end of the endowment period, how will I receive my money?

A—You will have a choice. You may either get the insurance proceed in a lump sum, or you may ask VA to pay them to you in equal monthly installments ranging in number from 36 to 240. If you die before all the installments have been paid to you, the remainder will go to your beneficiary, if you have named one.

Q—I am receiving a VA pension for a total and permanent nonservice-connected disability. I have a house which I inherited, and I want to sell it. Must I include all the proceeds of the sale as income, in figuring whether I come under the income ceiling for pension purposes?

A—Since you inherited the house, the entire proceeds from its sale would be considered as income for pension purposes. If you receive a lump sum payment, it will apply for the calendar year in which you got it. If you get paid in installments, whatever you receive during a calendar year must be included as income for that particular year.

Q—I was forced to interrupt my training under the World War II GI Bill to go back into active service. I expect to be discharged soon, and I want to continue with my GI studies. Is there any time limit for resuming?

A—You must pick up your training within a reasonable period following your discharge. The "reasonable period" is determined for each veteran on an individual basis and depends on a number of factors such as the availability and so on.

Q—I know of a World War II veteran who has become incompetent. Can his GI insurance premiums be paid by another person?

A—Yes. The premiums may be paid by any person on his behalf. If the veteran's premium return envelope isn't used, care should be taken to identify the payment properly, including the insured veteran's full name, address, date of birth, service serial number and insurance number.

Chicago Urban League to Sponsor Sales Clinic

CHICAGO — (ANP) — In line with increased job opportunities in the sales and promotion field, the Chicago Urban League will sponsor a Sales Clinic Saturday, Nov. 1, at the Parkway Community Center. The clinic, which is free, open to both men and women interested in selling.

Purpose of the clinic is to familiarize selling aspirants with the field of selling. Duties of both the employer and employee will be presented and discussed, with a period given to questions and answers.

The program will feature talks from firm executives, top salesmen and others engaged in this business.

Ebony Associate

Editor Dies

CHICAGO (ANP) — Milton A. Smith, associate editor of Ebony magazine, died here suddenly Friday in Porvident hospital. He was 40 years old.

Cause of the death was believed to be a cerebral hemorrhage. Smith had been hospitalized shortly before his death after suffering a stroke.

His passing brought to an end a brilliant career during which he served as a war correspondent and worked for leading periodicals of the nation.

Among some of the positions he held before coming to Ebony were either reporter or columnist with the New York Journal-American and PM, both dailies; the Brooklyn Eagle, also a daily; the Afro-American, and other journals as a World War II correspondent. He also served as a public relations consultant.

Smith was born in Washington, D.C. He was educated in D.C. public schools and at Howard university.
