

Pneumonia Claims Sister Elizabeth Kenny at

Sister Elizabeth Kenny died on Sunday at her home in Toowoomba, Queensland, at the age of 66.

Sister Kenny, an Australian nurse, devoted a lifetime to teaching Infantile Paralysis treatments, but herself was completely paralyzed on her right side and unable to speak, when death came.

A victim of cerebral thrombosis, pneumonia was the direct cause of her death. A new drug, trypsin, was flown to her from the United States in a last minute attempt to save her life, but even though it was administered to her, it was too late.

Sister Kenney, through courage, and determination, rose from the obscurity of a bush country nurse, to become nationally known and famous in the battle against infantile paralysis, scientifically known as poliomyelitis.

Physical therapy, hot applications and extensive exercises, were her method in combating this dread disease and has been adopted in hospitals in many countries including the United States, Canada, Belgium, Spain, Italy, Czechoslovakia, India and in South America.

We have lost a great friend and humanitarian.

Nebraska New Legislators For Increased Road Funds

By CLIFF SANDAHL
Chairman, Nebraska Editors Highway Conference

When the Nebraska Legislature goes into session next month, there will be 11 new members and, significantly, most of them will be ready to act quickly and favorably on increased highway revenue legislation.

That's obvious from commitments made to the All Nebraska Association of Road and Highway Associations (An-Ar-Ha). All of the senators-elect except Ernest A. Hubka of Beatrice are on record.

Some say "yes" flatly while others qualify their answers as to whether they believe urgent need exists and whether they will give active support to immediate and long-range financing. Here is what they say, by districts:

Second — John Aufenkamp, Julian: "I believe that present revenue is inadequate to maintain our present highways and build the new roads and bridges that are desirable. I have refrained from any firm commitment. I am particularly interested in a long-range building program, but I believe that in the meantime we have emergency situations as to certain roads."

Third — Tom Dooley, Papillion: "Yes" unqualifiedly.

Nineteenth — Howard L. Britt, Lincoln: "I am definitely for an adequate ton-mile levy on the

Youths Have Successful 'Pew Rally'

The Youth Fellowship of Quinn Chapel A.M.E. church sponsored a "Pew Rally" on Sunday November 30th, at 4 p.m.

Misses Betty Joe Newton and Barbara Qualls were soloists. Elbert Sawyer was guest speaker. Others on the program were Miss Mattie Sue Nevels, Miss Shirley Conrad and Miss Carrie Dee Moore.

Prizes were given to the team captains having the most collection and attendance.

Presiding Elder John Adams, Rev. Alfred Newton, of Beatrice, Nebraska, and Rev. John R. Harris, pastor of the church gave closing remarks.

This was the first such affair given by the youths of Quinn Chapel, and needless to say it was a tremendous success, financially as well as attendance.

Miss Dorothy Green is supervisor of the group.

Child Hurt In Accident

Helen Chapple, 10, of 2119 T, suffered slight injuries to her right leg Saturday afternoon after she was struck by the right front bumper of a car driven by James R. Miller, 32, of 4025 E, which was going west on O street between 19th and 20th, and was knocked to the pavement.

heavier trucks, graduated upward as the weights increase. I am against increasing gas tax and car licenses at this time."

Twenty-Fifth — Lester H. Anderson, Aurora: "I was one of the introducers and supporters of the 1949 session gasoline tax and license increase. Well, you know what happened—defeated nearly 2 to 1 in my district. I thought I was doing what the people wanted in '49. There is only one question before the people and that is who pays for the roads."

Thirtieth — Joseph D. Martin, Grand Island: "Yes" unqualifiedly, plus: "My final answers will depend on the efficacy of the plans introduced."

Thirty-Second — Dr. William A. McHenry, Nelson: "We have fooled around too long with the highway situation. It is time that the Legislature does something about it. I think the way to get this done is in a real appraisal of highway needs, on a long-range program, which should be worked out by all interested parties. We must realize that the highway improvement, which is needed, will require more funds, and I think the Legislature should do that."

Thirty-Third — Tom Coffey, Alma: "I believe that the Nebraska highway problem is considerably larger than finance alone. I shall insist that the en-

Harvard Law School Paper Cites Delaware Lawyer

By Samuel P. Perry, Jr.
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (ANP) —

This week the Harvard Law School Record cited the case of Atty. Louis L. Redding of Delaware, well-known civil rights attorney, in a special article.

Jonathan Lubell, its author, called attention to the testimonial given Atty Redding in September at the Hotel DuPont, Del. Present at the affair were leading state officials paying tribute to the lawyer for his contribution to the movement to eliminate segregated education.

A graduate of Brown university (A.B. degree) and the Harvard University Law School, Atty. Redding decided to practice in Delaware at a time when no Negro had previously been admitted to the Delaware bar under the "apprenticeship" of a lawyer practicing in Delaware.

Regarding the segregated education cases in which he had been engaged, Atty. Redding stated:

"It is difficult to summarize these cases in a few words. We did not succeed in the impossible venture of having lower courts reverse the Supreme Court and declare color segregation unconstitutional.

"We did elicit a ream of oral testimony by experts in many fields demonstrating the harm wrought by State-imposed segregation in education. On the basis of this, the Chancellor in the Delaware Equity Court found, that in our Delaware society, state-imposed segregation in education itself results in the Negro children, as a class, receiving educational

Already several southern states have taken steps to reorganize their education systems in the event that segregation is outlawed in public schools.

Two governors, Herman Talmadge, Georgia, and James Byrnes, South Carolina, have indicated that they will not have integration in their schools, regardless of how the Supreme court rules.

The Clarendon county and the Topeka cases were originally scheduled to be heard Oct. 14. The Supreme court, however, postponed hearings of these two cases in order to allow appeals from other school suits challenging segregation. The court wanted to hear all cases at the same time.

Since the postponement of hearings on the two cases, the Supreme court has upheld a lower court decision holding that segregation in interstate railroad travel is unconstitutional. Subsequently, segregation on public buses in interstate travel also has been outlawed. The court's attitude in the railroad case has caused many persons to think that it will outlaw segregation in schools.

The Clarendon county was the first case in the 20th century to challenge the constitutionality of segregation in public schools. It had its origin when parents of some 67 pupils in the county sought relief from overcrowded school conditions for their children. About 808 pupils in the county were forced to attend three rundown wooden structure schools while 876 white pupils received their lessons in two modern brick buildings.

When it became evident that school officials in the county were not going to take steps to improve schools for Negroes, court action was started.

With all the cases to be decided, the U. S. Supreme court will be able to render one clear decision on the status of segregation in public education.

Reaction to possible decisions have varied in the South.

In South Carolina, Gov. Byrnes made segregation in schools an issue in the November election. He asked voters in his state to support an amendment to the state constitution to delete a requirement that the state provide free public schools. The state supported the amendment and thus paved the way for the abolishing of public schools in the event the court kills segregation.

Another southern governor has stated emphatically that regardless of a court decision outlawing segregation, Negroes and whites will not be mixed in schools in his state. He is Herman Talmadge, Georgia's pride and chief executive.

However, some southern officials have taken a different attitude. This group of progressives feel that segregation is breathing
