Allon Chapel To Give Lectures

The Allon Chapel S.D.A. Church is presenting a series of lectures for the improvement of better Christian Fellowship. The lectures are as follows:

THURSDAY — "Marriage and Divorce." Married couples and prospective couples especially invited.

FRIDAY — "The Mystic Ladder." You must climb it, I must climb it. It leads home. All persons are urged to attend.

Funds given the American Cancer Society's 1953 crusade will finance more than $4,500,000 worth of cancer research next year.

To alert the public about cancer more than 140,000,000 pamphlets were printed and distributed by the American Cancer Society last year.

Last year the American Cancer Society allocated $4,100,000 for cancer research. Support this effort by giving to the 1953 ACS crusade.

Your Sports Round-Up

By James Sawyer
Spring practice got under way at the University of Nebraska, April 8th. It was a great day for many young men who plan to participate in the spring drills.

Three negro boys, in the person of John McWilliams, a freshman, of Sydney, Sylvester Harris, also a freshman, from Kansas City, Kansas, and Charles Bryant, a sophomore, from Omaha.

Spring drills will end, May 2nd, with the annual Varsity-Alumni Game. Many former stars of Nebraska U., will be on hand to play in this popular game. Many other sports will take place on that day.

Approximately 800 players from the United States, Canada, Mexico and Puerto Rico will compete in the National Volleyball Tournament at Boys Town May 6-9, the sponsoring Omaha YMCA announces.

Waseda University of Japan spikers have already sailed for the United States and competition in the Boys Town meet. Another collegiate division team is entered from Mexico City University, plus a women's team from Puerto Rico.

There will be five divisions, United States open, collegiate, armed forces, women's and veterans.

The Lincoln Chiefs announce the signing and optioning of two young baseball players. Left handed pitcher Thomas Moore of Chicago, Illinois, has been signed by the Chiefs and optioned to Galveston, Texas, of the Class "B" Gulf Coast League. Moore is 6' 2", 175 and is 22 years old. He served in the Armed Forces for over 3 years and while stationed at Camp Stoneham, California, he won 20 and lost 2 against some of the best college and Army teams in California. Upon his release from the service he signed for a bonus with the Oakland Club of the Pacific Coast League and was optioned to Wenatchee, Washington, of the Class "A" Western International League. He won his first start there and then developed arm trouble and when it failed to respond to treatment, the Oakland Club released Moore. He has rested since last June and worked out in a Chicago gym all winter and reported that he was ready for a trial. At the end of his first week of training, the Galveston Manager, Barney White of the "White Caps" Baseball Club, states that his shoulder and arm look excellent and he is throwing very hard. He is being assigned to Galveston on a "right of recall" basis.

The Lincoln Chiefs also announce the signing of Robert Erickson of Lincoln, who played service baseball with the Army Air Forces on Okinawa in 1950 and '51, and last year participated in the Northern Association semi-pro league. Erickson is 5' 11", weighs 165 and is a center fielder.

Newcombe Pitching For Army Team

Big Don Newcombe has another year of service to go, but he will pitch as much for the Army as he would for the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Private Newcombe recently was assigned to the demonstration section of the medical field service school at Brooke Army Medical Center here. That makes him eligible to play with the Brooke Comets, one of the busiest and most potent non-professional teams in the nation.

When he is not putting on demonstrations to medical corps personnel on how to operate under combat conditions, the huge Negro right-hander can be found on the baseball field trying to bake out some excess poundage under a warm Texas sun.

Newcombe hasn't been at Brooke a month, but he is already in fine fettle on the mound despite the extra weight.

He worked three innings last Saturday night against a semi-pro team at Waco and struck out eight and walked one while holding the opposition scoreless.

"I didn't throw hard," Newcombe said later. "I guess my big size and reputation must have scared them batters a bit."

Newcombe, who will be 27 when his time is up next February, realizes that his age is pushing major league standards, but he hopes to get in enough work with the Comets to return to the Dodgers in the form which saw him post a 20-9 season in 1951 after a 19-5 freshman season in 1949 and a 17-8 record in 1950.

It is likely the Rahway, N. J., project will get his wish, too. For Brooke usually plays 100 or more games a season. The Comets have won eight straight without a setback this year.

Newcombe got to pitch in but two games while taking replacement training at Camp Pickett, Va., last year.

The six foot, four inch Newcombe checked in at Brooke weighing about 245, but has been doing a lot of running in hopes of paring that down to about 230 or 235 pounds.

Newcombe is happy that he is assigned to a baseball-minded post, but said:

"What I'm really looking forward to is that Brooklyn uniform. That's a team I love to play with. It can't be too soon as far as I'm concerned."

He has been optioned to the El Dorado Oilers of El Dorado, Arkansas, of the Class "C" Cotton States League. During service with the Air Force he received the Korean Service Medal. He is 24 years old.

The Lincoln Chiefs also announce the further improvements at Sherman Field. A public drinking fountain is being made available, something that has never been at Sherman Field before, also the press box has been renovated to make more comfortable facilities for authorized personnel.

You Are the Detective

You are called to the offices of a local life insurance company. The manager, Curtis Wheeler, tells you this story:

"Henry Applegate, one of our agents, hadn't reported in to the office here for the past two days. We didn't think anything of it, knowing he has quite a large territory, and we just thought he was out collecting premiums and couldn't spare the time to phone in. This morning he stumbled into the office, telling us that he had been kidnapped and held for these past two days, that he had been robbed of more than $1,000 in cash premium money."

You turn to the wild-eyed young man, seated in the chair, his hair disheveled, a bandage over his left ear.

"I was walking down the street two mornings ago," Applegate begins. "I had all this money I had collected the previous week-end, and was coming to the office to leave it before beginning on my route. A car with two men in it stopped and the driver asked me if I wanted a lift to town. When I got in, the passenger jammed a gun into my ribs, told me to keep quiet if I valued my life. Then they blindfolded me, and after about a half-hour's drive, the car stopped, and they led me in somewhere. They whipped the blindfold off me and asked me to hand over my money. When I denied having any money with me, one of them lost his temper and hit me a terrific blow on the head with a blackjack. I lost consciousness.

"The next thing I knew was a terrible headache. I thought I was alone, because all I could hear was the ticking of my watch. But just then the two hoodlums came back into the room, and one of them said they'd been kind of worried about me—that I'd been out of my head and babbling when I wasn't sleeping. The one who slugged me laughed and said he guessed he didn't know his own strength. Anyway, they blindfolded me again, and drove me to the outskirts of town. Before I could remove my blindfold after getting out, they had sped away."

"Could you identify these men if you saw them again?" you query.

"Oh yes, I'm sure I could." "In the meantime," you then state, "you'll have to do a little more talking. There's a little flaw in your story that bothers me."

What is that flaw?
Solution
Applegate claimed that when he regained his senses all he heard was the ticking of his watch. You wonder how any standard-make watch could run for two days without rewinding.

The Internal Revenue Department has ruled that contributions to the American Cancer Society are deductible for income tax purposes, the ACS points out.
