relations between the porte and the United States legation here have assumed their normal condition. The non-execution of the Turkish government of agreements reached long ago on several questions affecting American citizens led to somewhat strained relations between the United States legation and the porte. Last week Mr. Leischman informed the porte that he would not discuss other matters until the terms of other matters already decided were carried out. The demands made by the United States demanded the rebuilding of the United States mission house at Kharput, destroyed at the time of the Armenian massacre there, and granting permission to Armenian women and children to join their husbands and fathers who are naturalized Americans. Mr. Leischman also had difficulty in negotiating with a responsible Turkish authority. His intercourse has been with the minister of foreign affairs, whose agreements have been annuled by the grand vizier.
