Making Mirrors.

For the benefit of "Interested Reader," we quote the following from Encyclopedia Britannica, in regard to making mirrors:

A perfectly flat and horizontal slab of stone, bedded in a heavy, iron-bound wooden frame, with a gutter running around the outer edge, is necessary. On the surface of this table, which must be perfectly smooth and level, is spread a sheet of tin-foil, somewhat larger than the glass to be operated upon.

are placed over the surface until the greater part of the amalgamated mercury is pressed out, the table is then tilted diagonally by means of dumb-screws, and all superfluous mercury finds its way to the gutter.

Crochet Drawn-Work.

There are many patterns in drawn-work which can be copied in crochet, and the greater durability of the latter renders this new work of great use in trimming household linen.

In making up small pieces like doll-eyes, bands for shirt-waists, collars and cuffs, etc., bias tape will be found an excellent substitute for piece linen, as it saves the trouble of cutting bands of material and the edges of the tape and crochet may be oversewn together instead of button-holed.
