

his mind and the spiritual side of his being. If you drive him from his bed in the morning to his bench, and from his bench in the evening to his bed he has no chance."

The audience was cheering at every sentence. Turning again to Mr. Beck the speaker cried:

"These men are American citizens and a man who is fit to die for his country ought to be permitted to live for it. These are the people who produce the wealth of the country. These are the people who make this country great. These are the people who do the toil for the nation."

"Why not give them something. Why not permit them to live. Go in to the factories and look at the feeble, under-fed children working there. We guard our children, and care for them and see that they are educated and cared for. These children are made in the image of our children and have rights the same as they."

"I came here tonight to speak of peace, 'International Peace.' I appeal to you, descendants of a heroic people, to meet these questions with the heroism your Dutch ancestry has shown. There is something that is greater than dying for one's country, and that is dying not for one's own right, but rather than trespass upon the rights of another."

Mr. Bryan had been cheered at every sentence. There were loud cries of "Go on."

"I did not have much chance to speak to you during the campaign," he continued. "You thought that those who talked as I did were enemies of the country. You thought we were radical and were going to upset things. But we were not radical. Beware of those who come after the radicals, who are not content to go back alone, but want revenge for what has gone before."

"My message to you is 'Peace on earth, good will to men.' Good will is the basis of peace at home or between nations. Though it is out of the line of the speech I had intended to deliver, I want to appeal to you, who come of a splendid people, to find in the recognition of the rights of your fellows a peace that cannot be found in any short-sighted selfishness."

Death of Miss Bryan.

The death of Miss Nannie Bryan has shocked the church and in fact the entire community, where she was well known and greatly beloved. It was so unexpected. No one thought two weeks ago that she would not now be journeying with us here. Again are we forcibly reminded that "In the hour ye think not the Son of Man cometh." "Be ye also ready." Not a member had we who was more faithful and no one could be more greatly missed. Always cheerful; always in her place; always an example safe for others to follow. Her journey was not long, but sweet; not measured by years, but by loving deeds. Not finished as we measure, but complete in Him.

Her sudden death brings to mind that beautiful hymn—

"I know not what awaits me,
God kindly veils mine eyes."

Miss Bryan was not only active in her church, but in all Christian work. To her the "Field was the World."

She will be greatly missed by the Y. W. C. A. of the city and state.

To the sorrowing family the sympathy of the church is extended. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints."—The Baptist Record, Lincoln, Neb.

The Cubans are experiencing some difficulty in obtaining the $35,000,000 loan on account of the present eastern war scare. Rumors were recently circulated that the tentative bidder for the loan had withdrawn, but this rumor was afterwards denied.
