as a unit, is tributary to the national tribute lavishly to campaign expenses, thus constituting a vicious circle by means of which the people are exploited and equal rights denied. The speediest and surest remedy seems to be for the people to gain direct and complete control of their state and national constitutions.

The Political Weekly as an Advertising Medium

dicious Advertising," published by Lord & Thomas.)

The political weekly deserves to be considered as an advertising medium for the following reasons:

First-Such a paper is taken mainly by those who believe in the political doctrines which it advocates, and advertisements appearing in the paper commend themselves to the readers. A man's political convictions are, as a rule, deep and lasting, and in every great crisis there are innumerable instances where the individual's views on public questions are stronger than family ties.| 'those who hold tenaciously to their political opinions naturally prize papers upon which they can rely for the information which they need in the discussion of political questions, and those who advertise in such papers profit by the confidence which the reader has in the publisher.

Second-Political weeklies are not read and thrown away like daily papers, but are laid aside for reference. The advertising matter is, therefore, of lasting value, and it is not uncommon for an advertiser to hear from

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everylody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

(Written by W. J. Bryan for "Ju- | such an advertisement many weeks after it has ceased to appear in the рарег.

Third-The political weekly is growing, and bids fair to occupy an increasing place in the field of journalism. The daily is becoming a great business enterprise whose editorial page is either practically without political color or defends the interests of the corporations with which the owner is connected. The stockholders of the great dailies are generally unknown to the public; neither are the writers known whose pencils supply copy for the editorial page. It is impossible that an intelligent and thoughtful student of public affairs should pay a great deal of attention to editorials written by nobodyknows-who and often with an ulterior purpose.

With the growth of the daily it becomes less and less possible for the same person to be both editor and owner, and if he is employed to do the writing, he must write as the owner desires or forfeit his place. It is likely, therefore, that there will be an increasing tendency to read the daily for its news and the weekly for the thoughtful discussion of the problems of government. A weekly paper can be published without great expense and can be edited by the owner. Its circulation will depend partly upon the popularity of the ideas presented and partly upon the ability with which the paper is edited.

Fourth-The political weekly has a wider field than the daily can possibly have because a daily published in one city cannot hope to invade the precincts of another city, but a weekly Charcoal is a remedy that the more published anywhere in the United you take of it th better; it is not a States can find its way into every village and hamlet of the country. Its gases and impurities alway. present contents are not valuable because of their freshness as news, but because of their permanent usefulness in the consideration of questions of moment. Fifth-The political weekly is inexpensive as compared with the daily and reaches those who would not feel able to pay the price of a daily. It may be confidently expected, therefore, that political weeklies will increase in number, in circulation and in influence, and the value of an inch of advertising in such a paper will approximate the value of like space in a monthly magazine of like circulation. drug at all, but simply absorbs the ir, the stomac and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says. "I advise Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges to ell patients suffering from gas in the stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; th - cost but 25 cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation. yet I Humor of the Departments.

One of our exchanges tells of some of the queer letters that are received by the various departments of the government. The following is an extract from a letter received by the interior department from a man who was trying to help a friend to obtain a pension. No one can read the letter without recognizing that the person who wrote it was doing his best, although the humor of it probably impressed the officials as deepiy as the affliction described:

"He got diseased in his pipes, and when his pipes wasent wet he whistledd. He aident whistle no song, but just a plain, stringy whistle. There wasent no mockingbird business about it, for it showed sorrer; believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Absc"bent Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."
