BEWTON'S Heave, Cough, Dis-temper and Indigestion Cure A veterinary specific for wind threat and stomach trouble

THE MAN WHO PAYS IT ALL.

The monarch of the counting room, with single stroke of pen

Can raise the price of everything to suit his own sweet will; And shift life's heavy burden to the backs of other men Who have to sweat and labor while they're toiling up the hill.

But the man who gets the short end of the scheming every day Is the man who answers daily to the morning whistle's call.

All the added cost of living, rent and taxes, come his way,

For the man who works for wages is the man who pays it all.

Looting in all public office makes the taxes higher grow,

And the landlord without winking merely hoists the rent to match. and sugar up are hoisted and the grocer is not slow

To make those who have to use them come to the financial scratch. And the beef trust makes the butcher pay a higher price for meat.

But the butcher merely puts it where all other burdens fail; For he raises retail prices, and the end is, we repeat, That the man who works for wages is the man who pays it all.

First the trust hoists up the prices to increase their dividends; Then the wholesale man must follow, adding on his little bit. Then the retail man adds to it and the price then still ascends

Till a fellow as he watches thinks the raise will never quit. But the landlord raises rentals, and the coal man raises coal, Till they play lots more than even ere the prices downward fall. But the man who finds the bottom of the deep financial hole

Is the man who works for wages, for he's got to pay them all.

Let the times grow hard-instanter down come wages with a crash, But the man who hires labor keeps his cottage by the sea.

the times keep growing harder wages tumble all to smash,

And the mills are closed-while owners quickly off to Europe flee. Then, when times are growing better and the factory spindles hum

Labor is at once invited to respond to whistle's call.

But while all else quickly rises, labor's raise is last to come. For the man who works for wages is considered last of all.

A Little Fable.

The Little Brown Man rubbed his eyes and looked about nim. The last he remembered was going to sleep in his native country, and here he was in a new and strange country. The only familiar sights were a Benevolent Assimilator and the Flag. And the Flag was flying everywhere.

"Where am I?" queried the Little Brown Man.

"This is the United States," said the Benevolent Assimilator.

"Ah, the land of the free and the home of the brave?"

"Correct, my Brown Brother, That's just what it is." "And that tri-colored banner with the longitudinal stripes, the azure field and the stars of white-what is that?" "That, my Brown Brother, is the flag of the free. Wherever that flag floats liberty and equality is guaranteed to all men."

"Indeed! I suppose it is floating so numerously on that account."

"Yes, sir. That's it; this is 'flag day' when everybody raises a flag."

"And it means liberty and equality wherever it floats?"

"That's what. Liberty of speech, liberty of press, liberty of thought; equality before the law, and all that sort of thing."

"And those men over there-what are they doing?"

"They are framing up special laws for their own benefit."

"And those other men over there?" "They are preventing legislation that will destroy their special privileges."

"And those men over there in the shade, seemingly asleep?"

"O, those are a lot of kickers and agitators who are always complaining between times."

"But why do they sleep during the

"This is the day the party primaries are held, and they always sleep during the primaries."

"And does this banner guarantee all you say it does everywhere it floats?"

"Yes. sir; you bet."

"But it floats in my country and I am denied the right of trial by jury. I am denied a voice in the making of the laws which govern men. Editors there are sent to prison for giving utterance to their honest thoughts, and men are deported and banished for disagreeing with the men sent over to rule thom.

"Where'n thunder did you come from?"

"I am a tati e of Luzon, and my ancestors for three hundred years fought for the liberty which is de-

O, you are one of them Filipino savages, eh? Well, you'll get all that's coming to you, so don't worry. It takes time.'

"But how long will it take?"

"That depends. Just as soon as you are capable of self-government we expect to have you in a position where you won't dare ask for it."

'lest you cannot kill the yearning fer liberty, can you?"

"O, I don't know. We've got a lot of fellows in this country now who never think of it any more because we keep their stomachs filled."

"Then the flag does not mean what you say it does, eh?"

"Look here, Mr. Brown Man. That's treason and it shows that you people are treacherous, unworthy of being trusted, and only to be ruled by a firm hand. Now you hike back to Luzon, because we don't allow you in this land of liberty and equality. I've got to hustle down to the wharf and load a few gatlings made especially for purposes of benevolent assimilation."

Moral: Sometimes the flag is hung on the wall for the purpose of concealing a hole in the plaster.

Worse than Ever,

"A scientist declares that piano music will make the hair grow."

"That's all right. But if it's the piano music in the next flat I'd prefer a hairless crown."

Good Guess.

This discussion of a "noiseless Fourth" was well settled by a Lincoln youth of fifteen summers. His father gave him an article on that subject and told him to read it. The boy read it carefully, with frowning brows, and when he finished he laid the paper carefully aside.

"What do you think of it, son?"

queried the father.

"I bet the fellow who wrote that is older than Methuseler.

"What makes you think he is as old as that?"

"'Cause he's so old he's forgot that he ever was a boy."

The usual Fourth of July appropriation for fireworks will be made in that particular family.

Indefatigable.

"Hustlery is the best tax collector ever saw."

"That so? Why?"

"He spent six weeks trying to collect the canine tax on the Dog star."

The Facts.

"Puggsley tells me he sold that dog of his for an even thousand dollars the other day."

"He didn't sell it for cash?"

"No, he traded it off for two five hundred dollar Angora cats."

Learned It.

"I suppose you learned lessons of honesty and thrift while serving your term in prison," said the Emineut Reformer.

"Dat's what," was the reply of Bill the Bug, late No. 6778.

"What work did you do in prison?" "Dey put me ter makin' pasteboard shoes f'r de prison contractor."

Good.

"I say, Waggsley, I see that Kansas has refused to permit her natural gas to be piped outside of the boundaries of the state. What do you think of that?'

"That will be awfully hard on a lot of g. o. p. politicians down there who have been piping it to outsiders for the past dozen years."
