DIFFICULT TO BULLDOZE THEM THIS YEAR

Walter Wellman, writing to the Chicago Record-Herald from Cincinnati, O., says:

"It is significant that the republican managers are endeavoring to induce employers to bring pressure upon their men, as was done in 1896 very effectively and to a lesser extent in 1900. But it is admitted these tactics do not work as well now. In the first place, employers are not much disposed to exert themselves. Most of them are opposed to Bryan, and some of them think his election would be bad for business, but few of them are intense about it or care to incur the ill will of their men by trying to coerce or frighten them. In the second place, labor 'won't stand for it.' In the words of one factory manager, 'that has played out.'

"Here in Cincinnati was a case I know of. The owner of a shop called in his foreman and said to him:

"Sullivan, I think it only fair to tell you that if Bryan is elected this shop will be closed the 4th of November. I am a little ahead of the game, and will keep what I have and shut down rather than risk my profits in the Bryan dull times. Now, how are you going to vote?"

"For Bryan," replied Forman Sullivan, 'and so will most of the 183 men in the shop.'

MR. ROOSEVELT'S FRIEND AS A WITNESS

Following is an extract from an editorial printed in the August, 1908, number (page 140) of the Review of Reviews. The editor of this magazine is Albert Shaw, an intimate, personal friend of Theodore Roosevelt. In this editorial Mr. Shaw says:

"It has been supposed that a western business man would be made treasurer of the republican committee, but Mr. George R. Sheldon was finally chosen. Mr. Sheldon has acted as treasurer in New York state campaigns, and belongs as typically as possible to the corporations and Wall Street elements. If it was desired to avoid the impression of any relationship whatever with those particular factors in the business community, Mr. Sheldon's appointment could not be regarded as tactful. His business address is 2 Wall Street, and his name in the "Directory of Directors" shows him to be connected with a long list of corporations of a sort which many people call 'trusts.'"

THE STARCH TRUST

The National Starch company and the Corn Products Refining company, which together form the starch trust, in an advertisement in the New York newspapers (January, 1907) announcing an issue of bonds to retire other bonds, says:

"Of the many active and well-maintained starch plants throughout the United States which constituted the original security for the payment of your bonds, only two are now in operation. The remainder, having been idle for several years, are dismantled, uninsured and rapidly deteriorating, so that without attention they will soon become valueless for factory purposes."

It was Secretary Shaw who said "a protective tariff is not the mother of trusts, though it is the parent of a condition that makes it profitable for capital to combine."
