Cabbage Sweet Pickle — Select four solid heads; pick off all loose or poor leaves, cut out most of the thick center of the stalk, remove the coarse, fibrous part, and shave the cabbage as for slaw, or run through a chopping machine. Sprinkle with one cupful of salt and let stand over night; in the morning drain off the brine. Have ready four chopped onions which have lain whole in brine for twenty-four hours, and mix with the cabbage. Into two quarts of strong cider vinegar, or more, if needed, put two tablespoonfuls each of mustard, celery seed, whole cloves, allspice and black pepper, one tablespoonful each of mace and tumeric, adding a very little ginger. Add to this two pounds of brown sugar and two tablespoonfuls of made mustard. Bring this to a boil, put in the cabbage and cook until the heart of the stalks is tender, then put in airtight jars while boiling hot.

A good cold dish, which is very inexpensive, may be made by using a cheap piece of flank or round steak of beef in this way: Pound well, and season with salt and pepper, spread with dressing of bread-crumbs, roll up tightly and tie closely with clean twine. Put this into a kettle and boil rapidly for twenty minutes, then set where it will simmer for an hour. Then put it into a dripping pan with the gravy from the kettle (which should have been boiled down to a small quantity), set in a hot oven and baste often with the gravy. If it browns too fast, turn another pan over it. Bake until done, and a nice brown. Good for slicing.
